Japanese Seek Mexican Oil Across the Gulf From Cuba

Attorney Tells Offer To Buy Holdings in Vera Cruz Near U. S. Naval Station at Guantanamo.

REPUBLIC READY TO SELL TO ANYONE

State Department Learns Nipponese Government Itself Is Oil Investor.

By JOHN P. MCKNIGHT.

MEXICO CITY, April 7.—(AP)— Japanese interests have offered to buy into a strategic Mexican oil company, it was disclosed tonight.

Jorge Viesca y Palma, an attorney who said he was the principal stockholder of the Chontla company, which he organized two years ago, said Japanese had offered to buy all or part of his holdings.

The company has valuable concessions in Vera Cruz state, just across the Gulf of Mexico from the United States navy station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Its concessions are on 253 lots, each about 100 acres, in the vicinity of Minatitlan, Vera Cruz, the narrowest point of North America.
Tokyo dispatches recently said Japanese promoters were interested in building a pipeline across the 120-mile isthmus, from Salina Cruz on the Pacific coast to Minatitlan, about 600 miles south of Brownsville, Texas.

Canal Formerly Discussed.
(In previous years engineers have discussed the advisability of a canal across this strategic isthmus.
Presumably a pipeline right-of-way would be of a width sufficient for a good highway system.)
The Chontla concessions are near the site of the rich holdings of the Agulla (Royal Dutch Shell) oil company, expropriated by President Lázaro Cárdenas along with 16 other British and American oil companies on March 18.

Just before the expropriation, Viesca was negotiating with Agulla for sale or sublease of the Chontla holdings, on which he said all exploratory work had been done.
Along with growing indications that Japan is seeking a place in the Mexican field came a demand from oil workers tonight for expropriation of the only important American oil company left in Mexico, Mexican Gulf.

"Deal With Any Customers."
Officials, meanwhile, did not confirm directly authoritative reports that President Cárdenas had decided to reverse his previous announced policy of selling Mexico's oil only to democratic countries.
However, Gustavo Espinosa Mi-reles, general manager of the company Cárdenas set up to find foreign markets, told this correspondent that he would deal with any customers able to "put money on the table."

Neutral observers regarded as nearer realization their prediction of two weeks ago that Mexico might dump her oil into the laps of Germany, Italy and Japan.
The Chontla Company is not the only Tehuantepec isthmus com-

House Votes Veto Power Into Reorganization Bill

Hotly Contested Measure Survives Bitter Battle by 22-Ballot Margin; Reshuffling of Governmental Agencies Barred.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—
By a slim 22-vote margin the government reorganization bill survived an attempt to kill it today in the house.

Administration forces immediately followed up that victory by writing two vital amendments into the measure—each a concession to the opposition and each intended to draw more support to the bill on the ballot for final passage.

One would retain for congress the power to nullify, by a bare majority vote, any order the President might issue for the reshuffling or elimination of government agencies. It was approved, 151 to 113.

Accepted by Voice Votes.
The other would exempt the Federal Education Bureau specifically from any reorganization program. It was accepted on a voice vote.

But the first real test of strength between supporters of the bill and an opposition coalition of Republicans and rebellious Democrats came on a motion by Representative O'Connor, Democrat, New York, to kill the measure, without even throwing it open to amendment, by "striking out the enacting clause."

Without an enacting clause there can't be a bill.
After tellers had counted 169 members for the motion and 191 against, backers of the legislation broke into a wild cheer, hailing the decision as a definite indication the house would pass the bill ultimately.

The opposition merely pointed to the closeness of the totals.
"This is just one part of the fight," O'Connor asserted. "There will not be a reorganization bill."
Urging the legislators not to "compromise with principles," O'Connor said in offering his motion, "I am taking the step which

SENATE STRIPS BILL OF TAX ON PROFITS

Also Removes Imposit on Capital Gains for Flat Rate in Revenue Plan.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—
The Roosevelt administration suffered a reverse today when the senate, operating at a record pace, stripped the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes from the house-approved revenue bill.
For these levies, the chamber substituted taxes suggested by businessmen and recommended by the senate finance committee headed by Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi.
In brief, the senate voted to substitute a flat 18 per cent rate on corporation income, for the house-approved undistributed profits tax. The house levy applied to corporations with more than $25,000 net income and ranged from 16 to 20 per cent, depending upon the amount of profits distributed.
On the capital gains tax, the senate approved a flat 15 per cent rate in place of a graduated scale of rates voted in the house. The house rates were lower on gains realized over shorter periods.
The senate later refused to impose a 6-cent poundage tax on imported pork products. The tax, opposed by the administration, had been approved in the house.

'TWISTER,' FLOODS HIT GEORGIA AREAS

Power Line Torn Down, Homes Wrecked; Cooler Wave Predicted Here.

An "old-time twister" dipped into northwestern Coweta county late yesterday, crippling the 38-000-volt Carrollton-Newnan power line, injuring several negroes and other destroying or damaging several homes and other farm buildings.
Meanwhile, clearing, cooler weather was predicted for the Atlanta area today and tomorrow.
Heavy rainstorms for two days brought rivers to flood stage in many parts of the state, according to the United States weather bureau.

Livestock owners along the lower Chattahoochee were warned to herd their stocks as the river rose steadily. At Columbus it was reported at 29 feet, with a peak of 35 feet expected today. At Eufaula it was 34.5 feet, with a 40-foot peak expected, and at Macon, the Ocmulgee was 1.9 feet above its flood stage of 18 feet yesterday, and still rising.
Although freezing temperatures yesterday extended as far south as Texas, no threat of any serious cold was seen for Georgia. The end of heavy rainfall is expected by noon.

gent, Ga., linemen late last night

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 7.— (AP)—A tornado cut a path of death, suffering and tremendous property damage across a wide area along the Alabama-Mississippi boundary today, as a cold wave and floods beset other sections of the south.

Ten persons were killed at Aliceville as the twister demol-

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hudgins and Eight negroes were the dead at in downtown buildings.

FEAR EXPRESSED FOR 100 IN STORM

PAMPA, Texas, April 7.—(AP)— Fears were expressed tonight for the safety of approximately 100 persons stranded in automobiles as the worst April snowstorm in years struck the Texas panhandle.
Two school buses, lost for several hours, were found by an army of searchers, but Deputy Sheriff Inman said between 40 and 50 automobiles were stalled between that city and dispatched into the section from Birmingham.

At least a score more were injured as the storm swept Millport, Carrollton, Beaverton, Gorwest Alabama centers. Ten persons were injured in two south

Alabama tornadoes yesterday.

Terrific rains, hail and lightning accompanied the tornado.

48 Get Diaper Degree From 'Papa' College

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)— Forty-eight men were graduated from New York's new "college for prospective papas" tonight, schooled in a new system of pinning diapers.
The trick is to fold the cloth in a short rectangle instead of a triangle and fit it on the baby like a pair of pants, explained
"Professor" Hazel Corbin, director of the "paternity" course, to make it more comfortable for the baby.
As for floor-walking, the grads learned it's best not to.
The "college" was started a month ago by the Maternity Center Association. The men were put through a brisk four-week course covering everything from selection of the doctor to holding the baby for bathing.

Hollanders Choose F.D.R. Most Important

THE HAGUE, Netherlands,
April 7.—(UP)—Readers of Holland's foremost weekly newspaper, the Haagsche Post, chose President Roosevelt to head a list of the world's "10 most important men," publication of the ballots showed today.
Premier Benito Mussolini won out over Adolf Hitler for second place. In fourth place behind Hitler was Anthony Eden, former British foreign secretary. Josef Stalin, Soviet dictator, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, of China, were fifth and sixth, respectively. Dr. Hendrick Collin, Netherlands premier, was eighth.

'SIEGE OF ALCAZAR' RAGING IN CHINA; THOUSANDS SLAIN

Battle for Possession of Taierhchwang Now Transcends Purely Any Military Importance.

CHINESE MORALE
AT HIGH STANDARD

Fierce Fight Enters 18th Day; Fields Strewn With Dead; Outcome in Doubt

SHANGHAI, April 8.—(Friday) (AP)—With casualties running into thousands, the battle for possession of Taierhchwang now transcends purely military importance, foreign observers believe.

It has become a major issue of the undeclared war, they say, involving "face pigdin"—prestige and morale—for both Chinese and Japanese. They compare it with the Spanish civil war battle of Toledo, where the Insurgents lifted the siege of the Alcazar.

Chinese morale already has been boosted tremendously by their stand in the battered Shantung province village against Japan's drive toward Suchow, where the Tientsin-Pukow railroad crosses the Lunghai, east-west trunk line.

The fierce battle today entered its 18th repititious day of thrusts and counter-thrusts through streets and fields strewn with dead. The little town's mud walls have been flattened by artillery fire, but the outcome still is in doubt.

Chinese exulted at reports that a Japanese column had been annihilated by a Chinese assault and two others were retreating northeast toward Yihshen.

Official reports to Hankow said
5,000 Japanese were wiped out at Taierhchwang and the Japanese salient broken.

(Independent advices from Suchow tended to confirm the Chinese reports. But they said the Japanese were assembling the largest and most heavily armed force they have massed since the battle of Shanghai.)

Japanese Claims.
Japanese, countering the Chinese reports, said they were mopping up Chinese troops within Tai-erhchwang and were attacking a Chinese force surrounded in the railroad station, outside the city walls.

Taierhchwang, on the north bank of the Grand canal, is the terminus of the narrow-gauge railroad that connects with the Tientsin-Pukow.

Reports from Hankow said the jubilant Chinese commanders,
General Tan Gen-po and Kwan
Ling-chen, had asked to be executed if they failed to wipe out the Japanese at ruined Tai-erhchwang.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek published a circular telegram to the nation expressing hope that news of the "victory" above Su-chow would not dazzle the popular but would impress all with the necessity for more and greater sacrifices before final victory would be possible.
Foreign observers said Japanese

Blind Pensioner's 'Driving' Stirs Dropping of 168 From Dodge Rolls

Simultaneous applications for a pension as a "needy blind person" and for a driver's license have thrown a spotlight of investigation on the Dodge county welfare program and caused suspension of 168 persons from pension rolls, it was revealed yesterday by Lamar Mur-daugh, director of the State Department of welfare.
Murdaugh said a "large number" of those suspended from the pension rolls were closely related to members of the county welfare board, two of whom, he said, themselves were drawing pensions.
He announced acceptance of the resignation of Mrs. Ruth Pescock as county welfare director, and in-

Dog Show Entries Close At 11 Tonight

Time Extended 5 Hours in Competition Sponsored
by Constitution.

By LEE ROGERS.

Blueblooded Atlanta dogs last night received an extra five hours, until 11 o'clock tonight, in which to enter The Constitution-sponsored Atlanta all-breed dog show April 15 and 16 at the Shrine mosque.

Taxed to the limit all yesterday aiding owners to enter their dogs correctly, officials of the Atlanta Kennel Club, Inc., saw all entrants could not possibly be qualified by the announced closing time, at 6 o'clock tonight, so they ordered a time extension.

Entry blanks are full particulars about the "South's Finest Dog Show," as the 26th show of the Kennel Club is being billed, can be obtained at Hastings Kennel Shop, Mitchell and Broad streets.
Approximately 250 dogs of all breeds had been entered last night and H. Morgan Milner, secretary of the Kennel Club, anticipates 500 will be entered when closing time is reached tonight.

For the first time, the Atlanta dog show this year will be under the direction of the Foley Dog Club.

FUGITIVE MONEY RETURNS TO STATE

Glenn Credits Change in Intangibles Tax; Asks County for Grady Funds.

Money taken out of Georgia to escape taxation is now returning to the state as the result of the new intangible tax law, bringing possibility of "substantial" increase in revenue in Fulton county, T. K. Glenn, Atlanta banker, told the Fulton county commission yesterday.

Glenn, chairman of the Grady hospital board of trustees, appeared before the commission requesting an additional annual appropriation of $35,000 for the hospital.

He outlined to the commission the "urgent need" at Grady for more equipment and personnel.
He said equipment sought was for replacement of worn-out instruments. He added that in certain parts of the hospital there was not enough equipment to operate properly.

Commissioner George F. Longino, pointing out possible loss of $500,000 from homestead exemption laws, outlined a plan for setting up a county-operated hospital.
Construction would be financed by a bond issue and the work of the hospital maintained by a slightly higher county tax rate, if the voters approved the plan.

Action on Glenn's requests for the additional appropriation, which would make Fulton's yearly appropriation for Grady hospital $120,000, was postponed until "we can find just where we are heading financially," commissioners informed Glenn.

Longino said Fulton county's budget must be balanced within 60 days. Clearing houses, he said, have agreed to carry the county that length of time and then "lend us all the money we need as long as we stay within limits."
The first monthly budget of the sheriff's office was submitted by Fulton's new sheriff, J. C. "Mott" Aldredge, showing an expenditure of $11,042.50, as compared with an expenditure of $10,047.50 for the February budget submitted by the retiring sheriff, J. D. Bazemore.
The increase was accounted for in that three matrons at Fulton tower and a county convict transfer guard were placed on the sheriff's pay roll.

PARIS, April 7.—(AP)—Troops were ordered held in readiness in Paris garrisons tonight to defend the senate if necessary during the crucial vote on Premier Leon Blum's dictatorial financial powers bill tomorrow. Issuance of the order was disclosed after rioting flared in the streets outside the senate tonight on the eve of what was considered to be certain rejection of Blum's bill by the upper house.

It was given by the permanent secretariat of the senate under constitutional rights conferred upon the president of the senate.
The order, it was learned, was issued in the middle of the afternoon when it became apparent that leftists would attempt to march upon the senate despite a government ban.

Troops Not Called.
The troops, which the president of the senate has the right to requisition whenever a legislative body is threatened, were in readiness in their garrisons tonight in case they were needed during rioting in front of the senate, but were not called.

During the evening, Communists, Anarchists and Socialists estimated as numbering more than 10,000 battled police and mobile guards in a vain attempt to march on Luxembourg palace, the senate building.

Several policemen and demonstrators were injured in the fighting which followed summary rejection of Blum's bill by the senate finance committee, 25 to 6.
The measure, which would give Blum the right to decree all steps "judged indispensable to meet the necessities of national defense, protect the holdings of the Bank of France and rehabilitate the nation's finances and economies."

To Fall Senate Tomorrow.
The committee is to report to the senate tomorrow on the bill, which was passed by the chamber of deputies yesterday.

A letter sent by 165 members of the Institut de France, including 20 members of the Academie Francaise, to President Albert Lebrun suggested that the President select a successor to Blum from "men outside political parties

THREE MEALS A DAY

By SALLY SAVER.

Questions regarding recipes or menus will be answered if you write or phone Sally Saver, the editor of this column, at Walnut 6565. Wasn't it fun? And isn't it useful? We mean, Sally Saver's Best Recipe contest. It's just like going visiting and being served something especially delicious and then your friend gives you the prized recipe. Well, friends have written from all over the state and each recipe is more delicious than the other. In fact, they sound so good, we've been starved all week—they are so excitingly appetizing.

might hard to do. We are reserving the others, for it may be that we can use them at another time.

If the ladies whose recipes are published today will call at Sally Saver's office, fourth floor of The Atlanta Constitution building, the award of $1 will be waiting for them. Of course, the check will be mailed to the out-of-town folks. Everyone seemed to enjoy Sally's contest so much that we will have a contest each week, but with a new idea for every week. For instance, next week Sally and her friends are anxious to learn about your grandmother's southern recipes. The fame of southern cooking is known throughout the land, and with good reason. So share with us your grandmother's favorite southern recipes and besides making many friends all over the state, Sally will pay $1, just as we did this week, for every recipe published in this column. Please send them in by Tuesday of next week and we will publish them the following week.

"Can Opener" Cooking.

Nothing could be more useful than these "can opener" recipes for we all use can goods to some degree. We either buy the cans or use those products we have thriftily put up ourselves.

Men have a lot to say about wives who cook with a can opener; but few are moved to criticize really well-cooked canned food. The objection is usually directed to the careless woman who simply dumps vegetables from the container into a saucepan, heats them quickly, adds little, if any, seasonings, and sends them to the table, expecting them to be relished by a man whose mother devoted her life to the art of cooking.

The subtle secret is that of seasoning and blending canned foods with each other, of adding a bit of onion, green pepper, a slice or two of bacon or salt pork or some full-flavored sauce to give new life and interest to these ready-cooked products.

These recipes from our friends have this secret of seasoning, and food blending.

Tomato Dimples.

1 can tomatoes
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon butter
Dimping Mixture:
1-2 cups flour
1-2 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoon baking powder
3-4 cup sweet milk
Put tomatoes, salt, pepper, sugar and butter on to heat in a saucepan having a tight-fitting cover.

Sift flour, salt and baking powder together and stir in the milk; make soft dough; flour the hands and mold small pieces of dough in little round balls—handle quickly and lightly.

When all are made, drop on top of boiling tomatoes, cover and cook 15 minutes without lifting lid. These are perfect dimplings, round, and feather light.

Sincerely,
MRS. ROBERT WILSON,

This recipe can be made up in the early morning if you want it for a bridge-luncheon and by waiting until just about 45 minutes before you want to serve it add the egg whites and stick in the oven. It's one of the most delicious dishes.

Asparagus-Almond Souffle.
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
3-4 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt

1-8 teaspoon black pepper

Paprika

1 1-2 cups canned asparagus cut in pieces about one inch

1-2 cup blanched, cut up, almonds
3 egg yolks, well beaten
3 egg whites
Put butter and flour in double boiler and blend well, add salt, pepper and paprika, slowly stir in milk and when sauce is thick remove from heat, add well beaten egg yolks, asparagus and almonds. When mixture is cool, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. I usually add a pinch of baking powder. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) in a well greased ring mold set in a pan of water. Baking time is about 40-45 minutes. Serves 6.

In the center of the turned out souffle 1 serve-canned crabmeat and celery in a cream sauce which is flavored with a small amount of sherry wine.

JIM DANDY CORN MEAL

"I can't praise Jim Dandy too highly. It is the whitest corn meal I have ever seen. And, it is the only corn meal I have ever bought in Atlanta that is all corn meal. In a six-pound bag of Jim Dandy I get six pounds of food. The usual heavy bran one sifts out of ordinary meal as waste is not found in Jim Dandy. It makes the best muffins and corn bread I have ever tasted, and my whole family is crazy about it."

Serve Your Family
JIM DANDY CORN MUFFINS

Use This Recipe

1 cup Jim Dandy "degerminated" corn meal, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons shortening. Sweet milk to make fairly thin batter. Beat eggs, sift in dry ingredients, add shortening and milk. Put in greased muffin rings; bake about 20 minutes in preheated oven, at 400 degrees.

Jim Dandy Meal is "DEGERMINATED", meaning all fat producing oil is removed—Jim Dandy Meal is "BOLTED", meaning all excess bran and other foreign matter is removed.

Smallpox 'Epidemic' Ends Sans Fatality

Atlanta's smallpox "epidemic" officially ended yesterday without a single death, Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, announced.

Eight persons were stricken with smallpox over a period of several weeks, causing thousands to have themselves vaccinated. Dr. Kennedy said the last case was released from the contagious disease hospital yesterday, completely recovered. It has been more than 10 years since smallpox caused a death in Atlanta. This year was the first in eight that there have been any cases reported.

Civic Clubs to Open Club for Poor Boys of Atlanta To Keep Them From Streets, Dives and Poolrooms

Games and Sports Will Be Provided for Youngsters to 18 Years Old.

By FRANK DRAKE.

The boys who roam Atlanta's streets and alleys because they have nothing better to do and no place else to go, are going to get a new chance.

The youngsters who hang around the dives and the pool rooms and listen to the "big shots" talk are going to have a club of their own. It will be a sort of boy heaven where any fellow between eight and 18 can go and have a good time all on his own hook—where he can play games, join a basketball team, wrestle, box, putter around in work shops, or just sit and read.

Representatives of civic organizations from all over Atlanta yesterday formulated preliminary plans for just such a club in a section of the city where poverty is the rule—not the exception.

Room for 500 to 1,000.

The club, they planned, will be for boys who have few opportunities to better themselves. It will be large enough to accommodate a membership of between 500 and 1,000 and to furnish all of them equal recreational facilities, and educational advantages.

Primarily, it will not be an educational institution. The most important objective will be to give the boys a place to have fun. This club, unlike most of them, will have no rules or regulations to go by. When a boy member comes in for an afternoon or evening, he can do just anything he wishes to amuse himself.

Henry Heinz and Hal Hentz were elected chairman and vice-chairman, respectively, of the organizing committee for the club yesterday. Leaders of all civic organizations in the city are invited to join in the movement and to lend their support in carrying the plans through.

Building Available.

A building large enough to care for the club and its members is available in a location where the need for such a club is a matter of utmost importance, civic representatives said. A director for the club, who has been trained in guiding boys' work, is ready to start work when the plans are carried through.

A nominal fee, only a few cents a month, will be charged the boys. The money from the fees will not be enough to run the club but the charge will be made to give the boys a feeling of ownership in the venture. Leaders said the fee probably will be only 5 cents a month.

"Hundreds of boys wander about the streets all day now, because they have no place to go and because no one cares where they go or what they do," said one man who is experienced in juvenile work. "They wander aimlessly, being subjected to all sorts of evil influences. No wonder so many of our boys are criminals at the age of 16 or 17 or 18."

Grow Tougher and Tougher.

"What can you expect a boy to do under conditions like these? Many of them just grow tougher and tougher from buffeting about, until they are problems to the entire community."

"Such a club will be the saving of these boys. The poverty-stricken areas of the city need this club."

Building Already Available for Low-Cost Membership of 500 to 1,000.

It was pointed out the club would not overlap the work of the Boy Scouts or the Y. M. C. A. It will cover an entirely different phase of the boys' life. It will serve boys other organizations never touch.

"This club is not the baby of any one group or organization," it was said. "The movement has been launched to enlist the support and aid of every civic minded person in the city."

BRENAU CHORAL CLUB GIVES CONCERT TONIGHT

A musical concert will be given by the Brenau College Choral Club at 7:30 o'clock tonight at Georgia Tech under the direction of Mme. Regina Vicarino. The program will open with a group of songs by the entire club, and will close with a cantata, "Three Springs." These numbers will be interspersed with solos, duets, quartettes and piano selections.

Miss Martha Thigpen, pianist, will play Chopin's "Nocturne" and Verdi-Liszt's "Rigoletto Fantasy." Solists for the club are Misses Vera Edwards, soprano; Ma Nita Boswell, contralto; Mary Virginia McBrien, soprano; Mimi Guyer, Martha Thigpen, Margaret Morehead and Leila Williams.

Americans Fighting Franco Cut From 9,000 to Only 200

Californian Says Volunteers, Who Fought for 'Ideals,' Have Been Eliminated.

By HENRY C. CASSIDY.

PERPIGNAN, France, April 7. (AP)—An American who served with the Spanish government army estimated today 9,000 Americans went to Spain to fight against the Insurgents, and he said he knew of only 200 who still were fighting.

All others, he said, either were killed, wounded or had disappeared.

He was John G. Honeycombe, 37, of Los Angeles, Cal., who acted as political commissar for the Washington and Lincoln battalions.

The old Washington battalion, Honeycombe said, was almost wiped out at Belchite, where the Insurgents' march toward the sea started four weeks ago, and "Franco finished the job at Gandesa."

In what he called "the Gandesa collapse," Honeycombe said 580 remnants of the Washington battalion were caught in the path of the Insurgent army that took the town last Saturday.

"The secret of the Insurgent advance," the Californian said, "is that the international brigades are through and the crack Spanish Lister and Campesino brigades are played out."

"There is nothing left to stop the Fascists (Insurgents). It should be over soon."

Honeycombe arrived hungry and exhausted after what he said was four or five days of walking and hitch-hiking to reach the French frontier. Rips in the trousers of his khaki uniform showed shrapnel wounds.

He said he suffered them during the retreat from Belchite after the Insurgent offensive struck March 9. The Americans, he said, were driven back under continual airplane strafing beyond Caspe and through Gandesa.

He said the American volunteers were paid sent pesetas (40 cents) a day.

"But most of us came to Spain to fight for ideals. That's what I came for, but when you see boys you have worked with being

BRIGADE VETERAN HITS HONEYCOMBE

NEW YORK, April 7. (AP)—The friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade issued a statement today denouncing John G. Honeycombe, who reported in Perpignan, France, the virtual destruction of the Washington and Lincoln Brigades, composed of Americans fighting with the Spanish government forces.

The statement, attributed to Captain Carl Bradley, executive secretary of the veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, read:

"Honeycombe was never a political commissar, as he claimed, nor was he present when the Lincoln and Washington battalions were merged. These battalions were merged in July of 1937 at the city of Brunete in Spain."

slaughtered, it shakes your ideals," he said.

TREMP, POWER CENTER, TAKEN BY REBELS

HENDAYS, France (At the Spanish Frontier), April 7. (AP)—Capture of Tremp, Catalonia's chief electric power center, was hailed by Insurgents tonight as a heavy blow to Spanish government resistance in the beleaguered northeastern corner of Spain.

Electric plants at Tremp, some 40 miles north of Lerida, supplied the power for most of Catalonia's war industries. Shutdown of the industrial plants was practically certain, Insurgents said.

$5,535,000 IS WILLED INSTITUTES BY PUTNAM

Other bequests included: Tuskegee (Ala.) Normal Industrial Institute, $25,000.

Father Tells Family 'Never Again' After His Attempt at Suicide

James Worthy, 34, Has New Outlook on Life; Promises Wife and Three Children He Will Look for a Job and "Start All Over."

Life had a new meaning yesterday for a 34-year-old father of three children who attempted to end his life Wednesday night by inhaling fumes from his 1931 model automobile.

Lying on a bed in his five-room shack at 1018 Ormewood avenue, S. E., with his family grouped around him, James Worthy solemnly promised that he was "never going to attempt such a thing again."

"I'm going to try to get a job and start life all over again," he said, "but I don't want charity." His wife promised she was going to help him, as she always had done. The bright-faced youngsters smiled at daddy and said they wanted him to get well, too.

Lack of money prompted Worthy to take his antiquated car to a garbage dump off North Decatur road Wednesday night, and after attaching a rubber tube to the exhaust pipe and running it through the floor board, to wait for the end of a life that seemed so dark. His attempt was foiled, however, when the car ran out of gasoline.

Although still despondent yesterday, everything looked a little brighter to the father. He had his wife, and there were his three children—Margaret, 11; Dorothy, 7; and James, 19 months old. They were worth living for, he decided.

Worthy was a nightwatchman for the WPA until he was suspended for 15 days, and it was because he didn't want the wife and kiddies to go without food that he tried to "end it all."

"When you try to do the best you can and you can't get the rest of the world to believe you, you're in a pretty bad fix," he said. "I still think I would have been better off if I could have gone through with it, but now that it's

DR. GEORGE M. TERRY, DENTIST, SUCCUMBS

Veteran Practitioner Will Be Buried in Greenwood Today.

Dr. George M. Terry died yesterday morning at his residence, 269 Boulevard Lorraine, Cascade Heights, after a few days' illness.

Born in Texas, he was a graduate of the old Southern Dental College, and had practiced here for the past 30 years.

He was a member of the Atlanta Dental Society, and belonged to the Methodist church.

Surviving are his wife; one daughter, Miss Ruth Terry, both of Atlanta, and two brothers, H. M. Terry, of Grayburg, Texas, and Cooper Terry, of Forney, Texas.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes, with Dr. M. A. Cooper officiating. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery.

all over I'm going to take a different attitude. You've never been in my condition."

Outside the shack sat the automobile which almost proved to be his death chamber. Worthy said he went to DeKalb county yesterday morning and got the car, but yesterday afternoon he was unable to get out of bed. His legs failed him every time he tried to stand up, he said.

The two oldest children go to school, and when they heard daddy's heartening words they scampered out to play. Mrs. Worthy also went about her daily chores. A new sun is shining for the Worthy family.

CIO DEFEAT ASKED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Green Calls on Craft Unions to Fight Candidates; Flays Kennedy.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 7.—(AP)—In a foot-stamping, fist-banging speech, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, today called upon the craft unions of Pennsylvania to defeat CIO-backed candidates in the state's 1938 elections.

By inference, he voiced opposition to the candidacy of Lieutenant Governor Thomas Kennedy, who is running for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination with the backing of John L. Lewis and United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey against the state committee's candidate, Charles Alvin Jones.

Each faction has a complete slate also for United States senator, lieutenant governor and secretary of internal affairs.

As he told the story of the CIO break with the AFL, assailing Lewis as "an autocrat and a dictator," Green stamped his right foot sharply, roared his challenge and banged his fists.

Green's first public stand on the lively Pennsylvania primary was made before the convention of some 1,900 delegates of craft unions reorganizing the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor. The followers of Lewis set up the Pennsylvania Industrial Council last week. The break came after Green revoked the federation's charter for refusing to expel the CIO unions.

A DESSERT THAT FRESHNESS NEVER DESERTS

"BAKED IN FRESHNESS"

MRS. S. R. DULL
Famous culinary authority, tests the ingredients and approves the recipes of Merita Cakes

Before Merita Cakes are made, Mrs. Dull must first approve the recipes and test the ingredients. Skilled cake bakers then bake the rich, golden batter in individual cake pans, in ovens of just the right temperature. Bright faced young women, especially selected for their skill and trained by Merita Bakers, ice them with a lavish hand. Then each cake is carefully wrapped in moisture-proof cellophane to reach your table in perfect condition.

But "freshness" is flavor's keeper, and all this infinite care would be in vain if Merita Cakes did not stay fresh and moist to the very last crumb. That's why Merita Bakers have a process of their own called "Baked-in Freshness." It guarantees lasting freshness and keeps Merita Cakes fresh to the very last slice.

Merita is one dessert that freshness never deserts.

Hotly Contested Measure Survives Bitter Battle by 22-Ballot Margin.

I believe the people of this country desire."

"The country believes Fascism is with us, and that this bill is a further step in that direction," he said. "The people fear this bill will serve as an escalator to a dictatorship."

A rattle of applause in the galleries at that point brought a rebuke for the speakers from Representative McCormack, Democrat, Massachusetts, who was presiding.

Time to Strike.

"Now is the time to strike," O'Connor roared. "This is the hour. We believe in the great principle involved have nothing to lose. If we do, we'll still be fighting."

It was the turn of supporters of the bill to yell their approval when Representative Warren, Democrat, North Carolina, stalked down into the well of the chamber to declare.

"By this motion, the gentleman from New York, Mr. O'Connor, is endeavoring to foist on the house of representatives some of the same ruthless methods he has attempted in the past," Warren asserted.

He said the New Yorker had insinuated that "in the parlance of the gutter," house conferees would "sell out the house" when the bill went to conference with the senate to be drafted into its final form.

"If the gentleman intimates that I would do so, I do not speak his language or think his thoughts," Warren stormed. "I have never been trained to stoop to conquer."

It was Representative Kniffin, Democrat, Ohio, who submitted the amendment to retain for congress the right to veto presidential reorganization orders. That would be done by means of a concurrent resolution, which would require only a majority vote of approval in senate and house and would not be signed by the chief executive.

Legality Questioned.

Foes of the bill repeatedly pointed out that President Roosevelt had said that a concurrent resolution, as a means of overriding presidential action, was of questionable constitutionality.

"This amendment," Kniffin contended, "prevents the President of the United States from substituting his will for that of congress." Republicans called it "bait" for votes.

Representative Pettengill, Democrat, Indiana, said it would enable 49 senators to overrule 47 senators and the entire house membership.

But Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, said the proposal was "clearly constitutional" because the reservation to congress of power to vacate executive orders would be as much a part of the law as the grant of reorganization powers to the President.

The amendment to exempt the education bureau from reorganization produced only a smattering of opposition votes.

Warren was its author. He said President Roosevelt had authorized him to read a telegram from the executive had received at noon from George Cardinal Mundelein, Catholic archbishop of Chicago. It said:

Church Not Hindered.

"As a result of my own investigation gathered from reliable sources I cannot find that the welfare or freedom of the Catholic church is in any way hindered by the pending reorganization bill. My sole purpose in stating this to you is because we have been drawn into the discussion and my personal knowledge of your fairness to us would render any such action impossible on your part."

President Roosevelt replied that the Cardinal's telegram was "most assuring, especially so because it comes from a sincere and outspoken champion of freedom."

Late in the day, the house agreed almost unanimously to add the veterans' administration to agencies which would be exempt from the reorganization program. But it refused, 109 to 63, to put the forestry service in the same category.

The house refused tonight to write anti-lynching legislation into the government reorganization bill.

It rejected, by a 71 to 14 standing vote, a proposal by Representative Holmes, Republican, Massachusetts, to add authority "to promote safety against lynching" to powers of the proposed welfare department.

Representative Gavagan, Democrat, New York, author of the anti-lynching bill the house passed more than a year ago, was the only Democrat to support Holmes' proposition.

blind pension and a drivers' license the county welfare board had approved the pension appeal. This, Murdaugh said, precipitated the inquiry.

New Appointees.

Murdaugh said he had requested County Commissioner W. D. McCranie to submit five new names for appointment to the welfare board of Dodge county, indicating that three of those now serving would be approved. They are Chairman J. M. Hailey, Niram Law and Jodie Tripp. C. E. Yawn, one member of the board, tendered his resignation. The resignation of Will Wynne, fifth member of the board, also has been submitted, Murdaugh said.

In his letter of resignation, Yawn attacked the welfare setup in Dodge county and told Murdaugh "there is no way on earth to comply with your rules and regulations."

Responding to this, Murdaugh said:

Kinkfolk on Rolls.

"We feel that no member of a county welfare board should himself draw a pension, and that the pensions allotted to kinsmen of the board members should be scrutinized carefully."

"It is interesting to note that Mr. Yawn's mother, his mother-in-law, a cousin and an uncle are on the pension rolls."

"In addition, Mr. Yawn's daughter is employed in the county welfare office, but to her credit it must be said she is a most satisfactory office employee."

Mrs. Peacock submitted her resignation and was reported as saying "it is impossible to keep up with the confusing rules from Atlanta."

Murdaugh said he accepted the resignation "because Mrs. Peacock must necessarily be responsible for the irregularities we have mentioned."

U. S. BANK RESERVES INCREASE $20,000,000

Rise Attributed to $65,000,000 More in Circulation.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—The Federal Reserve Board reported today the lendable excess reserves of the nation's banks increased $20,000,000 last week to $1,580,000,000—a new high since reserve requirements were increased May 1, 1937.

The increase was attributed largely to a $65,000,000 increase in money in circulation.

The board also reported it bought $46,000,000 worth of government bonds during the week, apparently to support the government bond market which was somewhat shaky last week.

To prevent a change in the total amount of its government security holdings, the reserve banks sold $46,000,000 worth of shorter term treasury bills.

JAPANESE SEEK OIL IN MEXICAN DEAL

Offer To Buy Holdings in Vera Cruz Across the Gulf From Cuba.

pany in which the Japanese were reported to be interested.

Careful investigation over three years by British and American companies has convinced their officials—although it was said they lacked complete proof—that Japanese capital was behind Compania Veracruzana, an intricate corporation ostensibly controlled by Mexicans.

Japan Itself Investor.

It was learned the investigations were conducted following a request for information by the United States. The Washington State Department was advised that the Japanese government itself apparently was an investor in Compania Veracruzana.

Three years ago Veracruzana took over properties and leases of Compania Mexicana de Laguna, which made no effort to conceal that it was Japanese-controlled after Mexican congressmen protested several times against Japanese activities in Mexico.

A check of concessions which the government granted last year offered no indication that Veracruzana—however it is controlled—has an inside track. Of 108 concessions, 101 went to Aguilera in last November's contract for Pozo Rica exploitation. These, of course, were revoked by the expropriation.

Two concessions went to individuals, one to Compania Mexicana de Petroleos Cosmos, in which Japanese also are interested, and the other four to Veracruzana.

Output Only 30,000 Barrels. Veracruzana's production at present is little more than a drop in the bucket of Mexico's annual output. It was authoritatively estimated at 30,000 barrels last year but oil men said production of most of the wells could be expanded considerably on short notice.

Investigators from other oil concerns were reported to have found some dozen Japanese carried on the Veracruzana payroll as cooks, water boys and so on while the officials and technicians were Mexicans.

Company Mexicana de Petroleos Cosmos is a still smaller company and has no actual production. Its concession for last year was for a single lot of 80 acres near Amatlan, Vera Cruz.

Executives of the expropriated companies said they heard negotiations were "not going so well" with Francis W. Rickett, British promoter, and Bernard E. Smith, New York stock broker, seeking to purchase Mexican oil.

President Cardenas was reportedly dissatisfied with the low price of 63 cents a barrel said to have been proffered by Smith and Rickett.

Finance Minister Eduardo Suarez was understood to have requested the Briton and American to put into writing their offer made orally yesterday.

One diplomatic source linked the return of Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican ambassador to the United States, with the government's pressing necessity to sell oil wherever it could find a buyer. Castillo came home for a conference with Cardenas.

This source expressed the view Castillo might be instructed to sound out Washington on the prospect of Mexico dealing with Japan, Germany and Italy.

Reports from the rich Pozo Rica and Cerro Azul fields said oil was spilling out of full storage tanks into rivers. Three Tampico processing plants, with a daily capacity of 92,000 barrels, were said to be handling less than 20,000 barrels.

The peso, meanwhile, lost part of yesterday's gain, closing at 4.15 to 4.35 to the dollar. The trading was unofficial, since the Central Bank of Mexico suspended foreign exchange dealings when the expropriation was announced.

U. S. DOES NOT WANT JAPAN TO INSTALL SELF

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—

Summary in Questions and Answers Of the Reorganization Measure

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—

Here is a summary, in question and answer form, of the reorganization bill pending in the house.

Q. What is the bill's major purpose?

A. Advocates say it is to increase the efficiency of the government. Opponents say it is to give the President dictatorial powers.

Q. What is the principal power the bill would give the President?

A. It would allow him to "group, coordinate and consolidate executive and administrative agencies of the government" and to abolish those that are not considered essential.

Q. Would congress retain any check on this power?

A. Yes. An amendment approved today by the house would retain for congress the right, by a simple majority vote, to nullify any reorganization order the President might issue. The constitutionality of this amendment has been questioned, however.

Q. Would enactment of the bill result in governmental economy?

A. The State Department's lenient attitude toward Mexico's seizure of American oil properties is in part dictated by fear that Japanese overtures for purchase of Mexican oil may meet with success, persons close to the department said today.

This government, they pointed out, does not want Japan to install itself in Mexico any more than she already has done. Japan's offer, it is understood, includes the use and development of a Mexican port.

The United States gives precedence to the statement of President Cardenas of Mexico that he will deal only with the democracies in arranging for the sale of oil.

If he is too hard pressed, however, persons in touch with the State Department are sure he will sell it wherever he can.

This is one reason—in addition to three others—why the United States is not putting the screws on Cardenas beyond the pressure of curtailing silver purchases and reducing its price.

The other three reasons are continuance of good neighbor policy, avoidance of conflict between Japan and Cardenas and his own people and reluctance to be the champion of big oil companies.

Q. Opponents say it would not, and might increase the cost of government—particularly by creating a new Department of Welfare to promote such things as public health, safety, sanitation, the interests of consumers, and the relief of the unemployed. Advocates dispute this.

Q. Aside from the question of granting broad powers to the President, what have been some of the principal charges made against the bill?

A. That it would destroy the civil service, devitalize the general accounting office, and perhaps permit governmental control of education.

Q. Has action been taken to meet any of these objections?

A. Yes. The house voted today to exempt the federal office of education from any reorganization program. The veterans' administration also was exempt.

Q. What, in brief, does the bill provide regarding the civil service and the general accounting office?

A. It would extend the classified civil service to more federal workers and substitute a single civil service administrator for the present three-man Civil Service Commission. It would make the comptroller general removable at the will of the President and provide a new auditor general to audit government expenditures after they are made.

Q. Would the bill affect the White House itself?

A. Yes. The President would be authorized to name six administrative assistants for himself.

Q. Could the President reorganize commissions, boards, independent establishments or government-owned corporations?

A. Yes, with certain specific exceptions, including the veterans' administration.

Q. What are the other exceptions?

A. The commissions on Interstate Commerce, Federal Trade, Power, Securities, Communications, Bituminous Coal, Tariffs and Maritime Affairs, and the National Labor Relations Board, corps of army engineers, coast guard and general accounting office.

elation over official reports that a stunning blow had been delivered the Japanese at Taiherchwang, northwest of Suhow, the vital railroad center in Shantung province toward which the Japanese are driving.

A Chinese spokesman said 5,000 Japanese were wiped out and the Japanese spearhead aimed at the Grand Canal was broken. He said Japanese detachments that broke through a ring of Chinese troops fled to the north, abandoning supplies and artillery.

Independent advices from Suhow apparently confirmed the Chinese reports, explaining that Japanese divisions pushing toward the junction of the Tientsin-Pukow and Lunghai railroads had permitted themselves to be surrounded, counting on artillery to blast a gap through the Chinese cordon.

They said the Chinese, however, brought up heavier artillery than the Japanese possessed and, using tanks for the first time since the battle for Shanghai, turned the tables.

Tens of thousands of civilians, students and troops marched, sang war songs and shouted slogans. Women and children followed the blaring bands.

Foreign reports said 20 boatloads of Japanese made an unsuccessful attempt to cross to the south bank of the Yangtze river near Hosten, above Wuhu, under cover of a barrage from four Japanese gunboats and five Japanese planes.

24 AIRSHIPS SEEK LOST PILOT, PUPIL

Florida Scanned for Missing Ship and Fliers.

ORLANDO, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—

Two dozen airplanes searched most of Florida from the air today for a pilot and a student flier who left the municipal airport here Tuesday at noon and failed to return.

Aviation Director E. C. Nilson said Pilot Charles Griffith, of Orlando, and his student, J. D. Patterson, 21-year-old winter visitor from Pittsburgh, Pa., were in the missing plane.

Wright Vermitee, of the Palm Beach Aero Corporation at West Palm Beach, said an Eastern Air Line pilot last night saw flashlight signals from a swampy section about 12 miles northwest of West Palm Beach. Vermitee had two of his planes searching the area late today.

HOOVER TO HELP REPUBLICAN DRIVE

But Says He Won't Take Part in State Campaign.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—(AP)

Former President Herbert Hoover came home today with the announcement he would "help elect a larger Republican congressional representation" in the 1938 political campaign.

He did not elaborate on his plans but said he would take "no part whatever" in the state campaign.

The home-coming marked the end of a tour of many European countries.

Asked to comment on the Roosevelt administration reorganization bill, Mr. Hoover remarked: "You can't say it's Fascist, but it is fair to say that it is in the attitude of Fascism."

The former President denied the Roosevelt measure was similar to the governmental reorganization measure he advocated while chief executive.

DOG SHOW ENTRIES OPEN TO 11 TONIGHT

Time Extended 5 Hours in Competition Sponsored
by Constitution.

Show Organization, Inc., of Philadelphia, which each year stages the Westminster Kennel Club show at Madison Square Garden in New York.

The Dixie Boston Terrier Club, which usually holds a specialty show for all classes of its breed, has announced that the Atlanta dog show will serve as its show for this year, and special judges will officiate in this group. In other words, there will be a show within a show.

Juniors Sell Tickets.
Ticket sales for the dog show will be under the direction of the junior groups of the Tallulah Falls school, which are the North Fulton Circle at the North Fulton High school and the Washington Seminary Circle.

Miss Ann Pappenhimer is president and Miss Mary Jane Campbell is vice president of the North Fulton Circle. Miss Mary Katherine Reeves and Miss Mary Joe Brownlee are president and vice president of the Seminary Circle. More than 100 members of the younger school set belong to the two circles.

A fee of $3 for each entry in the American-bred, open and special, and a $2 fee for each entry in all other classes and for exhibition only, will be charged. However, no fee is charged in the local or field trial classes when the dog is entered in one of the regular classes. Local owners are residents of Georgia. Dogs must be pure bred, but do not have to be registered.

More Than 2,000 Awards.
More than 2,000 prizes in trophies, cash and merchandise will be awarded at the show. There will be special prizes for local winners in each breed competition.

To assure expert judging of entrants, the Kennel Club has obtained seven nationally known dog experts—each recognized experts in specialized fields—to officiate at the Atlanta show.

Entries must be made to E. J. Rafferty at the Hastings Kennel Shop by 11 o'clock tonight. No entries will be accepted after that hour. Additional information may be obtained by telephoning Rafferty at Walnut 9464.

highly qualified by their character, their talents and by the services they rendered France."

(The Institut de France is composed of the Academie Francaise and the four other French academies and is supposed to include in its members the cream of intellectual France.)

Signers of the letter included Henri Cardinal Baudrillard, Vice Admiral Marie Lacaze, Edouard Branly, wireless inventor; Georges Claude, inventor who made production of liquid air possible; Admiral Georges Durand-Viel, former chief of navy general staff; General Robert Bourgeois, former vice president of the senate; General Georges Perrier, and General Jean Tilho, army hydrographer.

Rejection Expected.
A flat senate rejection of Blum's bill, at least in its present form, was expected.

Although most observers believed he then would resign, the premier had several possible courses open.

1. He can attempt a compromise. Since the only possible compromise would consist of renouncing blanket financial powers, this course is considered hardly probable.

2. He can accept senate rejection and take the bill again to the chamber of deputies, hoping a second favorable vote might force the senators to change their minds.

The small majority which the measure received yesterday, however, probably would rule out such a course for it is possible the chamber would refuse to pass the bill a second time.

Can Draw New Bill.
3. He can ignore rejection by the senate and draw up a new bill for submission to parliament.

4. He can resign immediately after the senate vote, although he was not expected to make passage of the bill a question of confidence in his government. This conforms to his reiterated statements the senate should not be given the right of initiative to vote a cabinet from office.

Occupational strikes meanwhile increased hourly. Twenty-nine metallurgical factories were occupied at the end of the day by more than 50,000 sit-down workers, most of whom demand new collective contracts.

Most of the strikers hoisted revolutionary red banners over the plants.

Threaten March To Senate.
The rioting in the streets before the senate building came when Leftists massed for a demonstration in defiance of a government ban. The demonstration was designed to show the mass strength of Blum's popular support.

Flaming red posters throughout Paris called upon the extremists to flock to the senate.

"We must finish once and for all with this," they said.

"The handful of dry-hearted old men installed in their senatorial bastille for the defense of the 200 families have systematically opposed the will of the people for 18 months."

"They are under orders of the fighting employer class, which desires to end the union movement and social laws."

"Their sabotage has considerably aggravated the financial disrepair, the economic crisis and the international situation."

"They are the murderous expressions of an old world which is crumbling in on all sides."

Crowd Attacks Police.
More than 1,000 police and mobile guards were massed before the senate late in the afternoon and the clash came when demonstrators moved into the streets crying "down with the senate!"

There was a skirmish with a group of students who gave the Fascist salute; then the crowd surged against the police themselves.

While most of the Leftists braved police clubs, one group chased members of Francois De La Rocque's French Social party out of an automobile and seized bundles of Rightist propaganda, of which they made a bonfire in the street.

Chairs and bottles were flung at police, but by 8 p. m. (2 p. m. E. S. T.) the mass of demonstrators had been broken up and only a few hundred stragglers remained near the senate building.

The growing seriousness of the domestic turmoil found Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour working quietly on his proposed five-power alliance against Germany.

Secret Orders Issued.

The French envoys to Warsaw, Moscow, Praha and Bucharest were sent back to their posts with secret instructions to work for the creation of a new and solid barrier against further inroads in central and eastern Europe.

Similar advice was stated to have been sent to the French minister in Yugoslavia.

The French plan is for an alliance of Soviet Russia, Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia and France to act if there should be a Nazi attack on Czechoslovakia.

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKERS.

LAGRANGE, Ga., April 7.—The Rev. Dr. E. G. Mackay, of Atlanta, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of South Georgia Teachers' College, of Statesboro, will be principal speakers at commencement exercises at LaGrange High school, B. A. Fifty persons were hurt when the tail end of a tornado which demolished an empty school house near their home in Bond community, a few miles from Philadelphia, Miss., destroyed their residence.

Blinding snowstorms, heavy sleet, hail, rain and dust struck Oklahoma during the day. Farmers feared this weird combination of the elements less, however, than a forecast for clear, sub-freezing weather tonight. A hard freeze might destroy early crops over a wide area.

Arkansas felt a stinging north rain and likewise was promised a freeze tonight. Orchardists kept smudge pots glowing in hope of averting serious damage.

FRESH SNOWS, COLD FLAQUE 12 STATES

CHICAGO, April 7.—(P)—Extensive damage to orchards and power networks was reported today in the broad area swept by spring storms.

Fresh snow plagued 12 states from Texas to New England as thousands of laborers struggled to clear highways buried under Wednesday's heavy fall.

Damage of $1,000,000.
Sleet, rain and snow wrought new havoc in Ohio. Losses on fruit farms and along utility lines there were estimated unofficially at $1,000,000. Many communities were without electric service.

One of the best fruit crops in the history of the Texas plains was damaged heavily when the temperature dropped to 25 degrees. Snow and ice burdened blossoming peach trees in Delaware.

The wintry boomerang brought another flurry of snows to Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Blizzard Hits Kansas.
The worst blizzard in six years swept southwestern Kansas. Transportation virtually was halted. Communication wires were broken. Roads were blocked. Northern Pennsylvania counties measured eight to 14 inches of snow. To cope with traffic hazards, 2,500 workmen cindered state highways.

New York city assigned 23,000 men to remove a five-inch snow-fall. Some 2,000 were engaged in ridding Chicago of a 9.2 inch burden. Some roads from the city were still impassable.

A dwelling was blown down, trees were uprooted, and considerable other damage was reported on the old Jones place near Sargent. The home of Homer Cassels also was damaged, and several outbuildings on the Cassels farm razed. Wind scattered contents of his smokehouse across a field.

"Old-Time Twister."
"It was an old-time twister," Cassels said. "It was very severe in force, but lasted only a matter of seconds on any one spot. I watched it speeding across the country for five minutes or more."

Residents of Whitesburg also reported seeing the disturbance pass overhead.

Utility offices in Atlanta last night reported a "little trouble at Bremen and Rockmart," but had no definite news of the "twister" in the Sargent section.

The Southern Railway System's Birmingham train, due in Atlanta at 7:40 o'clock last night, was reported four hours late, due to block signals darkened by power failure between here and the Alabama state line.

Reports from Cornelia, in Habersham county, said that section was visited by a severe hail storm lasting 12 minutes. Stones measuring a quarter of an inch to an inch and three-quarters in diameter fell. Peach and apple trees were said to have been badly damaged.

Temperature Range.
Temperatures yesterday ranged from a low of 59 up to a high of 76. A minimum of about 45 is forecast for this morning and a slightly lower reading probably will be reached tomorrow but there is no freezing weather in sight.

Atlanta had more than two inches of rain in the 36-hour period ending last night and even larger amounts were reported from several other points. LaGrange had 2.30 inches, Columbus 3.45 inches, Macon 3.76 inches and Montezuma 3.87 inches.

No Serious Damage.
The fall was lighter in northern part of the state and, although it slowed planting operations there, no serious crop damage was reported. In the southeastern part of the state truck and other crops were said to have been helped materially as they had been suffering from a lack of moisture.

Weather bureau officials said the storm center was in northern Louisiana and apparently moving in a southeasterly direction which would take it along the northern gulf coast.

DEKALB TO ORGANIZE FIRST COUNTY C. OF C. IN STATE TONIGHT

Meeting Called by Citizens' Committee to Foster Rural-Urban Service.

Farmers and businessmen of DeKalb county will gather tonight in the Decatur courthouse to work out plans for organization of the DeKalb County Chamber of Agriculture and Commerce, designed to be the first organization of its kind to be formed in Georgia.

The meeting, to be held at 7:30 o'clock, has been planned for some time by the Decatur citizens' committee, composed of merchants, political leaders and businessmen and is open to everyone.

Hailed as "a county-wide organization for county-wide service," the new chamber is expected to reach a membership of 1,000 persons and an annual budget of at least $10,000 within a short time, according to organizers. Membership blanks were being mailed yesterday.

Membership Fee Small. Charles D. McKinney, chairman of the citizens' committee, said yesterday that no money or memberships will be solicited at tonight's meeting, since the purpose of the first session is to create interest in the idea. However, he pointed out, the membership fee will likely be very small.

Prominent DeKalb county citizens are scheduled to address the mass meeting tonight. Included among speakers will be Scott Candler, mayor of Decatur; W. M. Rainey, superintendent of DeKalb county schools; C. A. Matthews, county commissioner; Julius A. McCurdy Jr., county attorney, and John Wesley Weekes, former senator of the 34th district, and several others.

Objectives Outlined. Immediate objectives, as outlined for the new organization by the citizens' committee, will include the sponsoring of a one-day fair for Decatur during late September or early October. Beginning immediately, also, will be a six-month clean-up, paint-up, plant-up campaign.

The other principal long-range objectives, as outlined by the committee, are:

- (1) A continuous study of county problems.
- (2) Publication of books and posters describing the attractiveness of DeKalb county for farming, manufacturing, residential beauty, church property and educational facilities.
- (3) Bringing in of new industries to the county.
- (4) Publicizing Decatur, the county seat, as a center for new business enterprises.

Electric Installation. (5) Increasing installation of electric lines throughout the county, especially in the southern, eastern and northern sections of the county, either through the Rural Electrification Administration or the Georgia Power Company.

(6) Paving roads connecting rural schools and local markets and beautification of state highways in the county.

(7) Obtaining of better bus transportation between various county centers.

(8) Aiding farmers in learning of better farming methods, and obtaining of better residential buildings for farmers through aid of the Federal Housing Administration or other agencies.

School Curriculum. (9) Enlargement of the school curriculum to embrace new subjects in agriculture, home economics and vocational training.

(10) Erection of memorials to distinguished citizens of the county, such as Colonel George W. Scott, founder of Agnes Scott College, in connection with the 50th anniversary of the institution.

(11) Improvement of public playgrounds and advocating a community forest.

"We hope through this county-wide Chamber of Agriculture and Commerce to join forces with our fellow-citizens in every part of our state at a time when it is so important that the morale be bolstered," declared McKinney. "We do not feel that we should leave the work of building or reconstruction to the government or the state, but should remember that the essence of our governmental system is the continuous, intelligent and unselfish efforts of local citizens."

While plans will be made at the meeting tonight, organization will be perfected and charter members accepted at the second meeting of the group, to be held at 7:30 o'clock next Thursday night in the courthouse.

Members of the citizens' committee, besides McKinney, are Alfred G. Kuetzner, secretary; C. H. Blount, treasurer, and Scott Candler, C. M. Candler Jr., C. A. Matthews, Julius A. McCurdy Jr., L. W. Morris, E. P. McGee, A. F. Newman, R. F. Sams Jr., S. L. Threadgill, W. M. Rainey, M. A. Thompson and John Wesley Weekes.

Four Husky Gridmen Seek Beauty Honors
ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—(AP) When the University of Georgia co-eds select their "most beautiful man" Saturday afternoon at a tea-dance at Woodruff Hall, there will be four football players in the list to choose from.

It was announced today that out of the 24 candidates for the honor, the co-eds had selected Harry Stevens, a halfback; Bill Mims, also a halfback; James Skipworth, end, and Rupert Blount, a halfback.

The four grid stars will compete against the 20 other boys as a part of the little commencement week-end.

WAGES AND EARNING CAPACITY

In view of the favorable report, this week, of a new wages and hours bill by a subcommittee of the house committee on labor, attention should be called to some pertinent statistics on earning power of workers. These statistics provide data which must be considered by any authority which may be set up to prescribe minimum wages or maximum hours for any industry.

Peter Molyneux, editor of The Texas Weekly, points out that, although the average wage of industrial workers in the south is lower than that of similar workers in the north, the southern manufacturer pays out in wages a larger proportion of his manufacturing income than does the manufacturer of the north.

For the purpose of this comparison, records of 11 southern states are compared with a group of four states in the north. The southern states are Georgia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana. The four northern states are New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan.

In the southern states, out of net income—that is, proceeds of sales of products after deducting the cost of raw material—the manufacturer pays $39.45 of every $100 in wages. In the northern states only $32.17 of each $100 goes for wages. Yet the wages of the southern worker are lower than those of his northern brother. Why?

The answer is simple. It is because of the predominance in the south of industries which add much less to the value of the raw material, by processing, than is added in the north. Added to this is the fact that there is a larger investment of capital per worker in the north, thus increasing the worker's productive power.

Mr. Molyneux points out that in the four northern states the total value of manufactured products, annually, is $6,674 per worker. Of this, $3,095 represents cost of raw materials, leaving $3,579 for all other costs, including wages.

In the 11 southern states the value of manufactured products, annually, is $4,568 per worker, of which $2,827 represents costs of raw materials, leaving only $1,741 for all other costs, including wages.

With an income per worker less than half that of the northern manufacturers, it is beyond reason to expect the south's industry to pay wages equalling those of the north.

Yet the south, as stated, pays a much larger proportion of its industrial earnings to its workers, despite the fact that the scales of pay are lower. If it were not for the savings made in other ways, due to climate, lower overhead and other costs, it would be impossible for southern industry to continue to operate.

That any mandatory increase of wages, drawing southern pay nearer to the level of the north, is the way to cure the situation is self-evidently mistaken.

The only certain road to higher wages in the south is by increase in capital investment, thus making possible a larger creation of wealth by every worker. If the income is increased, the past record assures that the southern workers will get their full share of that increase.

Mandatory increase of pay scales, without increase of income, can only result in reduction of operations and the laying-off of a large proportion of the workers now employed. Which is the road to further business depression, to increased burdens of relief and to a mounting total of unemployed, despairing people.

GIRLS' HIGH HOME-COMING

Today is Alumnae Home-Coming Day at Girls' High school. Old grads and young will be returning, fraternizing and discussing present and bygone days. And many an unwanted tear will be dashed away amidst the laughter.

Seldom, however, in the life of an institution of learning, is such an event fraught with so much interest and significance. As a center of wholesome influence, the school is well known. But so inseparably is it associated with its principal, Miss Jessie Muse, that the names, "Muse" and "Girls' High," have become practically synonymous.

Many a returning alumna will remember the good counsel, the sound advice—even the scoldings—administered at a time when it seemed as if the paths ahead were leading in the wrong direction. And how the touch of an understanding hand changed the whole outlook in life!

It has been this human touch, this understanding of young girls' problems, this tendency to follow, instead of opposing, the trend of the times, which has contributed so much to her success during the 26 years she has served the school as principal.

Not infrequently, young girls are perplexed at the apparent absence of opportunity for women. They need not be. Students and alumnae of Girls' High school need go no further than the office of their own principal for an outstanding example of success of the finest type.

FOR COUNTY-WIDE SERVICE

A movement underway in the county of DeKalb holds promise of substantial contribution to better living in that subdivision of the state. Headed by a group of the most substantial citizens of the county, an effort has begun to create a DeKalb County Chamber of Agriculture and Commerce. A mass meeting will be held tonight at the courthouse in Decatur and from that meeting the impetus to carry the plan to successful organization is anticipated.

Although a considerable portion of the city of Atlanta lies in DeKalb county, and although the city of Decatur itself is a municipality of distinct enterprise—it is older, in years, than Atlanta—it has been unavoidable that the smaller community has been overshadowed by metropolitan Atlanta.

It is the dream of the men behind the movement to create this chamber, however, to make it primarily an organization for the benefit of the rural areas of the county and for the smaller towns and communities. The business and professional leaders of Decatur will take part in the body, but their contribution will be chiefly an effort to benefit the farming sections.

One proposal of especial interest upon the tentative program for the organization is that for a series of community fairs, culminating in a county-wide fair at Decatur, held in conjunction with an "Old Home" week when all former residents of the city or the county would be invited to come back again for a visit.

This would, likewise, be linked with an extensive and practically continuous "clean up and paint up" campaign, with prizes offered for those rural homes and smaller urban communities which showed the greatest improvement.

An organization such as that proposed in DeKalb can, if composed of a county-wide and enthusiastic membership, achieve untold good for every resident of the county. Atlanta itself and Fulton county will watch with sympathetic interest the progress of the proposed new chamber and may well find in its successful operation the inspiration for a similar organization.

FRANCE AT THE CROSSROADS

In the rapid and violent changes of European alignments, the rather significant events indicating a disruption of the French republic have been largely overlooked. Democracy faces the barricades in the volatile nation which for the last 20 years has been a dominant factor in Old World political and economic affairs.

The France of Cyrano de Bergerac and Francois Villon has dreamed its way into chaos. Tasting the fruits of victory in 1918, the French set about to keep Germany subjugated through a system of collective security dominated by Paris. That the Reich economy collapsed time and time again because of these policies did not bring any hint of the consequences to the French government. Faced then by Hitler, who climbed to power over the successive internal collapses which in some measure be linked with the world-wide crash, France's political unity failed in contemplation of the loss of security as nation after nation of the Little Entente either drifted closer to the Nazi ideology or were weakened by Germany's strength.

From that day France has been in turmoil. Seeking to build its armament to combat the menace to the east, and at the same time attempting to institute a planned economy under the guise of social reforms, the country has been rent politically by the struggle for internal control of the democratic structure. Today, Leon Blum, who as premier in 1936 attempted to establish a "New Deal" patterned after the Roosevelt model, is gambling the existence of his government before parliament. He asks powers which zealous Frenchmen fear to yield lest they entrench dictatorial powers in the cabinet.

More than half the national income is absorbed by the state for governmental expenditures, almost twice as much as the accepted limit to which a state may go in seizing the resources of its citizens.

Of such stuff is made the pattern for totalitarian seizure of control.

MEXICO'S OIL SEIZURE

(From The Columbia State.)

Mexico's expropriation or seizure of oil properties owned by American and British investors seems to have been cannily timed. It came when nations were preoccupied with heavier tasks than the protection of private investments made by their nationals in foreign lands. Even so, the episode has created surprisingly little excitement.

Old-time "dollar diplomacy" would demand an immediate and threatening response from the United States and from England, but that kind of diplomacy, happily, has not the power it once possessed because in enlightened countries it no longer is so deeply respected. When William Jennings Bryan declared private investors who seek fortunes in foreign lands should go it alone, he was denounced hotly, but a statesman today might say the same thing without running any risk of denunciation, and even without creating great interest. The American viewpoint on such matters has changed. The Mexican government and the Mexican workers, seeking improvement in internal conditions, now will find some sympathetic understanding, where formerly they would have had angry fists shaken in their faces.

None the less, the Mexican episode is not ended. Mexican officials say they will pay for what they have done, and they will be expected to do so. Secretary Hull will seek a fair solution, rather than an arbitrary one. His efforts, probably to be supported by the British, will gain force because of Japan's quick entry into the Mexican situation in quest of oil. Mexico does not seem prepared to operate the oil properties efficiently, and neither the United States nor England will be any too pleased if Japan steps in and operates them for Mexico, in the interest of Japan. That would represent no improvement at all in Mexico, or in world relationships.

AMERICA SPEAKS

Sentiment Against Adding to President's Power Seen Growing; 42 Per Cent in Survey Say Roosevelt Has Too Much Power as Reorganization Fight Starts.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, April 7.—With opponents of the reorganization bill claiming that it gives the executive too much sway over government, public opinion studies reveal a sharp increase in the number of voters who think President Roosevelt already has too much power.

In so far as increase of presidential power is an issue in the reorganization fight, some aspects of the measure probably run counter to public opinion, for only a small minority of voters think the President should have more power.

Tests of sentiment on presidential power were conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion in two surveys, one last October and one completed last week. In both cases the same question was put to a representative cross-section of voters in all sections of the country. The question read:

SHOULD PRESIDENT HAVE MORE POWER?

Do you think the President of the United States should have more power or less power than he now has?

The vote in the two surveys was as follows:

It will be noted that the percentage saying "less" has risen sharply, while the vote in the other two categories has fallen off. The group saying the President has too much power is now the largest single group.

In 1933-1934, as every student of politics knows, the President was given extraordinary powers to combat the depression. Undoubtedly the majority of voters approved. But today, with business again slumping off and a new crisis arising, the trend of public sentiment is toward limiting the President's power.

One-fourth of the voters in President Roosevelt's own party think he has too much power, according to the survey. Among Republicans the vote for less power is overwhelming, as might be expected.

Republicans 3% 75% 22%
Democrats 25 25 50

OPINION DIVIDES
ON ECONOMIC LINES

The survey also shows that on this issue, as on many others connected with politics, there is a sharp cleavage of opinion along economic lines. Voters in the upper and middle income groups are more anxious to see the President's power reduced than are voters in the lower group. This difference undoubtedly arises from the fact that the New Deal has tried to assist the "have nots" while imposing taxes and regulatory legislation on the "haves."

The vote by income groups follows:

	Per Cent Saying	More	Less	Same
Upper Income Group	8%	62%	30%
Middle Income Group	14	43	43
Lower Income Group	27	30	43

The world may wag at a faster pace,
Life's rhythm turn to swifter;
But Nature waits, her form to grace
With beauty, for the spring.

They Had Trouble With Hogs.

In the April issue of The Atlanta Historical Bulletin is to be found an article reproducing the records of proceedings of the Atlanta city council in 1854. Municipal worries then appear to have been somewhat different from those of today. They probably took them quite as seriously, however. Mayor Hartsfield would undoubtedly like some of the financial items for today, or I miss my guess.

Hogs seem to have been one of the most persistent worries. Here are excerpts:

Jan. 20, 1854—$150.00 a year voted for rent of Council Hall; also, for 1853.

Feb. 10, 1854—Force employed for maintenance of streets—Overseer, $30.00 per month; three negroes, $17.00 each and two negroes, $15.00 per month.

Resolved that Ransom, a slave belonging to the State of Georgia, be allowed to sell coffee, cakes, &c, in the passenger depot in this City, for the accommodation of passengers.

Feb. 18—Resolved that the committee on Ordinance prepare an ordinance for removing of hogs from streets.

Resolved that two lamps be erected at the Railroad Crossing of Whitehall Street and that the City Lamps be lighted on dark nights by the Marshalls.

Feb. 24—Ordinance Committee asked to report ordinance to prohibit the trotting or running of horses or any animal or animals, across and over the Bridge across the Rail Road on Market Street.

Penalties Prescribed.
Mar. 3.—No one to drive an animal across any bridge faster than a walk. Penalty for free white, $25.00; for free black or slave, 25 lashes on the bare back, counted by owner or agent.

Whereas, There are doubts as to whether the ordinance of the 9th of May, 1851, removing Hogs from the Streets, is of force, for remedy whereof

Be it ordained by the Mayor and Council of the City of Atlanta That an Ordinance passed on the 9th of May, 1851, removing Hogs from the Streets of the City, be and the Same is hereby re-ordained, and that the same take effect from and after the 20th of this present month, March, 1854, and that the Clerk re-publish the same.

Resolved, that the Mayor procure, for the City, a Seal with Suitable Device.

Mar. 24—Resolved that James A. Medlin's proposition to act as Lamp Lighter be accepted, and that the lamps be extinguished each night between 12 and one o'clock. (He lit and put them out for 50 cts. a day.)

Apr. 7.—Street Committee reported a contract to pave Alabama Street from Whitehall to just beyond Planters Hotel, with rock not less than 8" thick raise the lower part 2 1/2", and grade it, for $350.00, to be completed June 20.

Apr. 18—Another proposed ordinance against hogs referred to Committee on Ordinances.

May 5.—Tannery and butcher pen of G. C. Rogers evidently a nuisance. Board of Health was urging more cleanliness, naming stables, private back yards, streets and alleys, cellars.

May 12—Resolved that Mr. Rogers should comply with the law and stop butchering at his tannery on Forsyth Street.

May 19—More "effectual" anti-hog ordinance passed.

Bill of S. K. Bartley for $20.00 for watering Whitehall Street in April and May, ordered paid.

June 9.—Marshal still reported chasing hogs.

Chas. Norst must remove his hog-pen; also, Joseph Thompson. The Marshal ordered to "remove or abate said nuisance."

June 30.—Report of the Committee on Public Buildings showed that in 1853 the City of

A Day in Spain

By ERNEST HEMINGWAY

TORTOSA, Spain, April 7.—(By Wireless)—Driving carefully between the boxes of dynamite set to mine the small stone bridges on the narrow road, we worked our way up the Ebro valley. Tortosa had been reported taken in a wild story sent out from France, but we found Tortosa, the town, smashed as ever but its three big bridges still intact and traffic moving freely between Barcelona and Valencia.

Now, we had left Tortosa far behind us and were driving north along the west bank of the Ebro. It was an easy road to defend, protected on the left by cliffs and ridges and on the right by the sullen, swirling coffee-colored flood of the Ebro. A soldier told us part of the road was under fire. He wasn't sure just which part. "A little further up," he said, "but you will be all right if you keep under the trees and under the shelter of the left bank."

Turn Spotlight So, wrapping the radiator cap in a rag and turning the spotlight toward the rear so it would not reflect the light, we worked our way along.

Stopping to ask another soldier who was walking leisurely in the direction of the front where headquarters was located, we heard machine-gun fire hammering on ahead and the noise of shells bursting. Then, above these reassuring sounds that meant the front was located, came the drone of planes and the bung, bung, bung of bombs.

Leaving the car in the shade made by the steep left bank, we climbed to the top of a steep, terraced ridge where we could see the planes. Below us was the river, the little town of Cherta in a bend between the river and the road, and beyond, the planes were bombing where a road cut between the river and the road. Then, they had been moulded in gray papier-mache for some fantastic stage-set.

Black puffs of anti-aircraft bursts blossomed around them and showed that government planes were above. Government anti-aircraft bursts are white. Then, with a noise as though the sky was being hammered to pieces, more bombers came over. Crouched against a stone wall on the ridge-top, taking advantage of the shadow cast, you saw from the red wingtips they were government, too.

As the droning faded, the machine gun firing intensified ahead, and as the shelling increased, you knew there was an attack a little way up the road. You climbed down from the ridge, but before you came down you had a chance to study the excellent defensive position that runs west from Cherta. If its heights can be held, Tortosa can be held.

Brigade Cuts Way Beside the car was a division of Lusitanian soldier from a division holding a line up the river. He was tall and gaunt and very cool and very tired.

"You can go on past the town, but there has had to be a little retirement today, so I wouldn't go too far," he said.

He said his brigade had been surrounded three times since the drive toward the sea had started, had cut its way out and drifted through at night and now had rejoined the division.

"We've held them here three days now," he said. "The Italian infantry is no good and we drive them back whenever we counter-attack, but they've got so much artillery and planes, and we've been fighting three weeks now with no rest. The men are all very tired."

On through Cherta, which had been bombed in the morning, and along a road recently strafed by machine gun fire, we drove until we found a motorcycle dispatch rider dismounting under the shelter of a tree. He told us the road was under fire ahead, so we turned back and drove down the Ebro to Tortosa.

The trip had proved that the road to Tortosa was being defended stubbornly and steadily and was highly defensible; that Franco's forces, trying to march down the Ebro to the sea, had advanced only five kilometers in the last three days; that the morale of the government troops defending Tortosa and the Valencia-Barcelona road was excellent; that there was no evidence of any kind of panic or discouragement, but that the troops were very, very tired.

Mr. Weatherhead remarks that Handel's "Messiah" can be heard, year after year, without any sense of staleness. Holman Hunt's "The Light of the World" has a new message every time we gaze upon it. The same is true of great literature and especially of great poetry.

"In the Twenty-third Psalm," he says, "we have great poetry, but we have something else—we have moral values and eternal beauty expressing the loftiest religious ideas. The calm assertions of trust in this Psalm are the sublimest ever breathed in poetry."

He thinks that David wrote the Twenty-third Psalm, and I am glad he does. David was a shepherd. He had the quality of mind and heart to be this heavenly message to his fellow human beings. David would never say "The Lord is my grocer—physician—banker," but he knew that when he said "The Lord is my shepherd," he was saying everything—saying everything for everybody. (That is for everyone who does really love Him and trust Him.)

I cannot tell you about this book. You must read it to appreciate it. I find myself greatly enriched by this first reading, wishing to say with another:

"From Him who loves me now so well,
What power my soul shall Shall live or death? Shall earth or hell?
No! I am His forever."

The Bee's Honey Was Doomed When Man Learned a Safe Way to Steal It

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Big-hearted Americans, with their natural preference for underdogs, were not alarmed by Mexico's confiscation of property belonging to American oil companies. "The oil belongs to Mexico," they say. "What right have our rich men to go down there and rob those poor people of their natural resources?"

But it isn't as simple as that. Suppose some ignorant fellow in your town should inherit a small tract of swampy land. It is potentially valuable, but worth nothing at all to him in its present state because he has neither the money nor the enterprise nor the understanding and skill to improve it.

You offer him a generous rental for a long-term lease, and he eagerly accepts it. Then you form a company to get capital; dredge that land to bedrock, and build upon it a skyscraper which is promptly filled with tenants.

Suppose, further, that the owner of the land, seeing how profitable your investment has proved to be, should feel cheated of his inheritance and demand the return of his property.

Would you consider his demand just? The natural resources of Mexico did belong to the Mexicans. But they were, for the most part, illiterate and primitive Indians, long exploited by the Spaniards, and they brought in millions of dollars, too proud to work.

As a whole, they were incapable of using their resources. They didn't know how. They had no money. They lacked enterprise. Without benefit of the skill and money of foreigners, their land would have remained undeveloped, without so much as a railroad, to this very day.

Though Mexico had the start of America by more than a century, her only modern civilization was built by outsiders. These outsiders were selfishly trying to make a profit, but they paid well for the privilege; and they brought in millions of dollars, gave jobs to thousands of Mexicans, and treated workers better than e. e. their native masters did.

Expropriating or confiscating or just taking the property of these outsiders is merely another form of the share-the-wealth idea as interpreted by the Fascist nations. However it may be idealized by individuals or nations, in practice it means: "You work hard to build something, and we'll gang up and take it."

Our whole system is doomed if title to property is established by having the power to take it.

"The protection of democracy is that we live it . . ."

These were the finest words in the whole fine speech Herbert Hoover made last week. They suggest a program upon which Americans might unite at this moment when every circumstance at home and abroad cries out for their uniting. The New Deal has spent its force. The Old Deal will never return no matter how much of the new one fades. In both there were great truths served, and great truths neglected. Remove from the debris now the bitter-enders, the extremists, the hate-mongers, the persecutors, and you have left a great majority of Americans who may be confused but who are, nevertheless, determined to go forward successfully and convinced that destiny meant them to do so. If these will look to their duty, live it in all its implications of majority rule, civil liberty and altruism, read Walt Whitman a little to refresh their souls with its immortal essence—America may light the world's way to happier destinations and arrivals.

As one who has always looked upon Herbert Hoover as the ablest man in the Republican party by many miles, we invite him, when next he reproaches Franklin Roosevelt for planned economy and cites that economy as the source of very nearly all our modern woes, foreign and domestic, to throw in a little plea of confession and avoidance for himself. The man who started all this planned economy business in American political practice was Mr. Hoover, of course. He began it as secretary of commerce and proceeded with it as President. Mr. Roosevelt merely came along and raised him several billions. Logic and experiment point out that both back now to Woodrow Wilson, to unimpeded competition, to the American way that has never been given a really fair trial in America.

Associate Editor Robert W. K. Mallet, of international edition of the Cotton Trade Journal, sends us some interesting observations on "The Cotton South and the Sino-Japanese War." He cites authorities who feel that, whatever the right or wrong of the quarrel in the Orient, the south can never escape the fact that Japan is her best foreign customer and that a Japanese victory in China with the resulting modernization, would mean more, not less, consumption of American cotton. It could mean that a less, less American economic and diplomatic policy made it necessary for Japan to "go to the trouble, time, expense and pains of developing an additional 800,000 to 1,000,000 bales of American-type cotton in North China." Mr. Mallet adds that "about 200,000 southern farm families and a rural population of approximately 1,000,000 people are represented in the production of cotton bought yearly by Japan."

All of which we report as an interesting and thought-provoking point of view on a question which concerns the south too vitally to be passed upon casually.

Mussolini's Claims.
NEW YORK.—You would think, in reading Signor Mussolini's grandiloquent speech before the Italian senate that a half-dozen armies are bearing down on the Italian borders, ready to lay waste the countryside, loot the cities and massacre the inhabitants. "The moment," he said, "one foreign soldier dares to set foot on Italian territory, our air force, now the mightiest on earth, will rain death and destruction on the enemy's cities, ruthlessly, totally until the population's morale is broken."

Of course this works both ways. The enemy will also seek to break the morale of Italy's population in the same manner. It is hard to say whose morale will crack first. No one, and especially not Italy, is sure of the morale of its population.

But let that be. Against whom is the Duce thundering this time? Not against England. It is against France. France certainly is not threatening the good man or his people. France threatened nobody, not even Germany, when she was weak and on her knees. Dr. Goebbels, the German propaganda minister, had to admit but a few days ago in a speech, that France had not opposed Germany's march into the Rhineland when she could easily have thrown the German troops back, marched across Bavaria to make the conjunction with the Czech-Slovaks and split Germany in twain.

Could it be that Duce Mussolini was talking to his friend Hitler in that bombastic speech about 9,000,000 bayonets and a fleet that won't gather barnacles in port? That is possible. Mussolini, of course, is not happy about the turn of events in central Europe. Hitler is getting ahead of him. His speech may have been a sort of discreet (discreet by way of speaking) warning to the Fuehrer not to forget that there is such a thing as Italy. And that Italy has to be reckoned with.

However, I feel that that speech foreshadows graver things. I think that Mussolini, now that France is winding up the war in Spain, served notice on France in that speech that Spain is going to be an Italian colony, that is to say, that the Italians won't get out even after Franco is entirely victorious. He knows full well that France will strenuously object to a permanent occupation of Spain by Italian forces. He is telling France ahead of time that he intends to stay on the Pyrenees.

President Roosevelt; On the AAA

Executive Discusses Supreme Court Decision Against Agency That Had Functioned for Three Years.

ARTICLE NO. 15

President Roosevelt: On the AAA (III)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The AAA, quickly organized and put into effect early in the New Deal, as described in previous articles, functioned on a vast scale for three years. But in January, 1936, a sweeping supreme court decision made the huge structure suddenly illegal.)

(Following is President Roosevelt's comment on this dramatic climax in the story of farm relief, written by himself in his "Public Papers and Addresses," and never before published.)

By the end of 1935 the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, pursuant to the original act, the related legislation, was following five principal methods for the adjustment of farm production. These variations provided the flexibility required in the program for different products and different situations.

The various methods were: (1) voluntary reduction by agreement between the secretary of agriculture and individual farmers, (2) marketing agreements, (3) surplus removal and market expansion, (4) tax programs for compulsory control such as the Bankhead cotton act and the Keri tobacco act, (5) holding reserve supply of certain food, feed and fiber crops as protection from extreme price fluctuations.

During the three-year period, AAA had made 8,400,000 production adjustment contracts involving about 19,400,000 separate payments to farmers, and had disbursed about one and a half billion dollars.

In 1932 approximately 205,600,000 acres were producing commodities to which crop-adjustment programs were later applied. By 1935 these had been reduced to 180,129,000 acres, and of this acreage 150,543,000 acres were covered by production adjustment contracts.

The acreage "rented" by the government on which farm production was shifted by the program during its three years of operation was covered by 1,626,000 contracts in 1933, 3,105,000 in 1934, and 3,400,000 in 1935.

Program Self-Supporting.
The program was practically self-supporting. The total expenditures in anticipation of processing taxes were $1,233,435,000. The taxes actually collected fell short of that figure by about $290,000,000, which was the amount held up by court injunctions obtained by processors against the payment of the tax.

Had all of the taxes which had been assessed, $1,219,461,000, been paid, the collections would have fallen short of expenditures by only $14,000,000. Allowing for the lag between assessments and collections, it seems that the expenditures would have been fully repaid by tax collections.

As the program developed, farm leaders and farmers played a progressively important part in policy and in administration. Approximately 4,600 county control associations were formed for most of the basic commodities for which voluntary adjustment plans were developed.

Vote for AAA.
In addition to these local associations, six direct referenda were taken in 1934 and 1935 among farmers of five of the basic commodities—wheat, cotton, tobacco, corn and hogs. Votes were cast in these referenda by nonresidents as well as signers of adjustment contracts. The vote for continuance of production-control measures for the various commodities ranged from 67 per cent to more than 95 per cent. The total vote in these referenda was 4,288,510, of which 3,707,842 votes were in favor of continuance.

As far back as late 1934 and early 1935, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration began to plan a transition from the temporary emergency phase of the adjustment program to a long-time phase, which would give a larger place to soil conservation and im-unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. The secretary specified corrective measures and was permitted to use his discretion only in the choice of the corrective measures specified by the congress.

References to interstate commerce were redefined, and operation of the act was sought to be brought rigorously within the limits of the interstate commerce clause.

The marketing agreement provisions of the amended statute were different from the original agricultural adjustment act. The broad and general powers which had been granted to the secretary of agriculture under the original act were limited.

Changes Fall to Help.

There were a number of additional strengthening and clarifying provisions inserted in this new statute which had no relationship to any judicial controversy as to its constitutionality.

The changes, however, were held by the supreme court of the United States, in Rice Mills, Inc., vs. Fontenot, not to have cured "the infirmities of the original act which were the basis of the decision in U. S. vs. Butler," which declared the original act unconstitutional.

The later decision stated that "the exaction still lacks the quality of a true tax" and that "it remains means for effectuating the regulation of agricultural production, a matter not within the powers of congress."

Instead of terminating the farmers' efforts permanently, however, the decision of the supreme court in the Hoosac Mills case had the effect of hastening the transition from the emergency phase to the long-time phase which had been planned. The decision, when it came, precipitated a sudden change that which had been planned as a gradual one.

For on February 29, 1936—less than two months after the court's decision—the congress enacted a new law to replace the invalidated portions of AAA. This new law was the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, which I signed on February 29, 1936.

Compulsory Crop Control To Be Subject Tomorrow

Compulsory crop control as a corollary part of the AAA and the administration's agricultural plan is discussed by Mr. Roosevelt tomorrow in the 16th article of the series composing the President's own story of the New Deal, and published exclusively in The Constitution in this state.

Five forthcoming books by the President, "The Public Papers and Addresses of Franklin D. Roosevelt," contain the notes and comments which make up this series of newspaper articles.

In explaining the compulsory crop control features of this program the President takes cotton as an example, shows the application of the Bankhead act, and the results accomplished before its repeal. He further emphasizes the difference between the emergency crop control of 1933 and the permanent policy as established by other acts.

Charges Parisian of Alienation, 'Conversation' With Wife in $1,000,000 Case.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(UP)—Simon Dannenberg, former Atlanta businessman, won a $25,000 award today in his suit against the wealthy Parisian art dealer, Jean Seligman, over the affections of his wife.

A jury of eight men and four women who heard the case before Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo deliberated four hours on the $1,000,000 suit, in which Seligman was charged with alienation of affections and "criminal conversation" with Dannenberg's former wife, Denyse, once a Paris modiste.

The jury returned the verdict for the defendant in the alienation case and for Dannenberg in that involving "criminal conversation." Dannenberg married Denyse in October, 1929, six months after the death of his first wife. They were divorced in Reno in 1933.

Leaders in Christian Work Assemble at Banquet

Three leaders in Christian Endeavor work got together last night at a banquet for the 200 delegates attending the twenty-seventh annual Georgia Christian Endeavor convention. Left to right, sitting, are Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the international society, and Harold F. Jackson, past Georgia president. The Rev. C. Howard Matheny, new Georgia president, is standing.

MARCHING FOR WAR HIT BY DR. POLING

Says Another Conflict Is Inevitable Unless Youth Is Turned Around.

Another great war is inevitable unless millions of marching youth throughout the world "are turned around," Dr. Daniel A. Poling, "fighting pacifist" of the World War and internationally known as a champion of youth, declared last night at the close of the 27th annual Georgia Christian Endeavor convention at the First Christian church.

Throughout the world, he said, youth is marching, rioting and staging demonstrations for such dictators as Hitler and Mussolini. "They march at the call of a desperately-hard patriotism—a patriotism which demands they pay with their lives if necessary," he said. "They march against each other and not with one another, and they march for persons rather than programs."

200 Georgians Hear Address.
Nearly 200 young people from all parts of Georgia heard the address by the president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

He denied that government, education, a revival in ethics or a solution of the world's economic problems would eliminate the inevitability of war. The solution, he said, was in youth's acceptance of the program of Christ.

Stressing the importance of economic justice, he said "We are bound to agree this great nation must solve the problem of distribution of privilege as well as the necessities of life if we are to survive as a democratic nation." "But even social security and government isn't enough," he added, "for you can't make people good by law."

Education Helpless.
Pointing to the helplessness of education in bringing about peace, he said "we have wisdom in the cockpit of planes that swoop down over China, and we have educated dictators who are beating minorities to their knees."

The Christian program, he continued, is harder than that of Hitler or Mussolini but "it will turn the youth of the world around and make them march with one another."

Before making his final address last night, Dr. Poling was guest of honor at a banquet attended by the convention delegates.

The Rev. C. R. Stauffer lead the devotional at last night's meeting and installed new officers elected at a business meeting of the convention yesterday afternoon.

Matheny Named President.
New officers are the Rev. C. Howard Matheny, of Waycross, president; Charlie Johnston, of Atlanta; Bert Hearn, of Columbus, and H. P. Kicklighter, of Glenville, vice presidents; Miss Katherine Digby, of Griffin, recording secretary; Mrs. Harold Jackson, of Atlanta, corresponding secretary; Luther Compton, of Atlanta, treasurer; T. A. Moyer, of East Point, world vice president for Georgia; Mrs. C. Howard Matheny, of Waycross, efficiency chairman; Clyde Underhill, of Savannah, publisher; Charlie Johnston, of Atlanta, publicity chairman; Robert Mell, of Atlanta, music director; Miss Marie Townsend, of Atlanta, world superintendent, and Mrs. Everett Kreager, of Atlanta, regional vice president.

Impeachment Charges Dropped as Land Commissioner Moore Resigns Post.

JACKSON, Miss., April 7.—(AP)—The 1938 session of the Mississippi legislature ended today, marked by the 11th hour resignation of Land Commissioner R. D. Moore and the quashing of nine articles of impeachment against him.

Moore's resignation summarily ended senate plans for an impeachment trial that would have opened April 18.

In the haste and excitement of the dying hours of the session, several important bills died on the floor.

Vienna Organ of Catholics Urges Union With Germany

Says Members Should Vote Yes on Plebiscite and Pray for Fuhrer.

VIENNA, April 7.—(AP)—The Wiener Kirchenblatt, official organ of the Catholic diocese of Vienna, today urged all Catholics to support the union of Austria with Germany in Sunday's plebiscite.

"There should be no doubt for any Austrian," said the paper. It enumerated four duties which should bind every Catholic to the plebiscite. It said:

"Obedience to the church leader appointed by God."

"With this 'ja,' however, four obligations exist for the period following the election:

"Obedience toward the new world authority, unbounded loyalty co-operation in the development of the fatherland, manifestation of Catholicism in the new situation, and, finally, a daily prayer for the great German reich (nation) and its Fuhrer."

(March 27 there was read in all Austrian Catholic churches a declaration signed by Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, primate of Austria, and five Catholic bishops. The prelates said it was their duty to declare our loyalty to Germans to the German reich in the plebiscite.)

Wednesday, after an audience with Pope Pius at the Vatican, Cardinal Innitzer published a statement in L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, which said the declaration "obviously did not mean approval of that which was not and not compatible with the Catholic Church."

1,717 CANDIDATES LISTED FOR NEW REICHTAG

BERLIN, April 7.—(AP)—The official gazette today published a list of 1,717 candidates for greater Germany's reichstag.

The candidates will be voted on April 10, when ballots will be cast in the plebiscite on Austria-German union.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler headed the list, in which many Austrian Nazi names are noticeable, such as Austrian Governor Arthur Seyss-Inquart.

Also a candidate (King Anton) Rintelen, former viceroy of Styria, who was to have succeeded the late Engelbert Dollfuss as chancellor of Austria in the 1934 putsch that failed.

Fallen Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of Austria, now a German citizen, also was on the list.

Also on the list was a candidate (King Anton) Rintelen, former viceroy of Styria, who was to have succeeded the late Engelbert Dollfuss as chancellor of Austria in the 1934 putsch that failed.

HULL URGES AMITY AMONG AMERICAS

Secretary's Address Is Read Before Pan-American Union by Welles.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(UP)—President Roosevelt removed Austria today from the list of nations receiving preferential tariff treatment from the United States.

The President's action, embodied in a letter to the secretary of the Treasury, was the second evidence of acceptance by the United States in two days of the actual absorption of Austria by Germany.

Secretary of State Hull informed the German government yesterday the United States would expect Germany to assume responsibility for Austrian debts to this country.

Germany was removed from the preferential tariff list some time ago. Removal of Austria means that products coming from that country must pay the highest American tariffs in effect. Products from other countries on the other hand, receive tariff reductions negotiated under reciprocal trade agreements with 17 countries.

Confesses Killing Wife After Forging Name To Get $1,000 Insurance.

CORDELL, Okla., April 7.—(AP)—Marion Lerner, 35, dark-haired Dill City dealer, confessed today to a first degree murder charge late today he had murdered his wife, an expectant mother, to death on their 15th wedding anniversary.

"I killed my wife by striking her with a hammer on the head and face, I am guilty," Lerner had confessed in an autobiographical letter Thursday.

"He broke down when we were confronted with an insurance policy for $1,000 issued on his wife," said E. N. Sasseen, assistant county attorney.

"We had been quarreling incessantly and I just decided to get rid of her," County Attorney Plumlee told Lerner's attorney.

Plumlee said Lerner's statement told how his wife, still conscious, begged and pleaded with him before he drove the family car into a ditch.

Program to Provide $4,500,000,000 For Business Loans Is Seen in Capital

Three Forms Are Hinted for Anticipated Plan to Combat Recession.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—A Roosevelt program to provide $4,500,000,000 for loans and direct expenditures to relieve unemployment and combat the recession appeared in the making tonight, informed persons said.

They cited these indications of the form to be taken by the administration's new effort to "prime the business pump" and aid the jobs:

1. A high administration authority said the President contemplated asking congress to approve a $1,500,000,000 program of public works loans to cities, states and other political subdivisions. The loans would bear no interest.

2. Chairman Glass, Democrat, Virginia, of the senate appropriations committee, predicted the administration would ask congress to appropriate between $1,250,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 "as a starter" toward meeting next year's relief needs.

3. The administration's bill to authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make $1,500,000,000 of long-term industrial and public works loans was near the end of its journey through congress. Senator Glass agreed to changes the house made in the senate version of this measure, and this indicated to many observers that the bill would be sent to the White House speedily.

Interest centered on the proposal for non-interest-bearing public works loans to cities and states, which would be required to repay them in 50 years at the rate of 2 per cent a year.

Officials said expenditures under this program could be started soon and could furnish badly needed demand for the products of the lagging heavy industries, such as steel.

Some objections were voiced in congress and official circles, however, to offering the loans without interest. The objectors said the government would have to pay around 2 per cent for the money it lent to cities and states, and that the borrowers should pay as much. Advocates of the program said, however, it would be necessary for the government to make the loans attractive in order to get the money out speedily.

President's Hopes.

Authorities said the President had set the stage for PWA financing a vast number of "projects of permanent usefulness" which he hoped would flush heavy industry with big orders and long pay rolls by mid-July. They said that, in addition to the usual type of public works, the program would include projects and the construction of multiple dwellings and large modern apartments.

PWA officials have been maintaining a skeleton organization since the administration shut off their expenditures prior to the present business slump.

They said they could start at once on many of the 2,798 projects which were approved two years ago but were never granted federal financing.

Some believed superhighways, such as the $50,000,000 road between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, Pa., for which the President approved a WPA grant of $24,000,000 yesterday, might figure largely in the new program.

Five Plans Cited To Aid Business

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Senator Duffy, Democrat, Wisconsin, cited today five proposals by which, he said, the government was trying to end the business slump. The Wisconsin senator enumerated:

1. A proposal to spend $1,500,000,000 for public works.

2. Senate revisions of the tax structure.

3. A bill to legalize RFC loans to business.

4. Expansion of government-insured housing.

5. The slum clearance program.

Duffy, in a radio address, said "this morning the White House announced a proposed program for PWA which would involve the spending of $1,500,000,000 for useful public works."

Emory Singers, Spirited, Finished, Win Ovation at Annual Concert

Minna Hecker, Guest Soloist, Receives Enthusiastic Reception; Audience Is Generous in Applause of Excellently Sung Negro Spirituals on Well-Arranged Program.

By MOZELLE HORTON YOUNG.

The Emory Glee Club gave its twenty-first annual concert at Glenn Memorial auditorium last night to a crowded house that gave it an ovation for an exceptionally fine performance. It seems that never have I heard the club sing better than last night. Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, beloved and capable director, has made of the group this season an ensemble that is of highest caliber. The tone quality was rich, vibrant and full, and the rendition of the songs, each one taking a personal responsibility of interpretation, made for an auditor's enjoyment. And all the other points of vocal ensemble, such as attacks, releases, shading, effects and diction were taken care of in a finished manner.

Minna Hecker was the guest soloist. Always her radiant beautiful voice adds keen enjoyment to any program, and last night was no exception, the audience giving her an enthusiastic reception.

The highlight of the program was the club's performance of Mark Andrews' "The Highwayman" arranged for soprano solo, tenor solo, male chorus and orchestra from the poem by Alfred Noyes. Miss Hecker and John Bumstead, president of the club, were the soloists, and Karl Slomkowski, pianist, provided accompaniment at the piano. The work is dramatic, unusual and most effective, and it was a noteworthy performance.

Rivaling interest with "The Highwayman" was the group's rendition of the spiritual "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." The club's rendition of this spiritual, and the numbers were forced to sing several others in addition to the selected group. The Emory Glee Club really has an incomparable style of singing these songs.

Another number that received great applause was the "Inflammatus et Accensus," from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville."

Catherine Swanger, 5, was hit as she dashed across the street in front of her home. She was less than a foot from the curb and safety when hit. Her two brothers, Sherman, 11, and Cecil, 8, saw the accident.

ONE VACANCY LEFT ON TVA PROBE BODYThree Senators Agree to Serve; Organization Meeting Delayed.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(P)—Three more senators, including one Republican, agreed today to serve on the congressional committee to investigate the TVA, but one remaining vacancy continued to delay organization of the inquiry.

Senator Donahy, Democrat, Ohio, who is expected to be temporary chairman of the group, said he would not attempt to call an organization meeting until Vice President Garner had completed the personnel of the committee.

The remaining vacancy was created by the decision of Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, to reject the appointment offered by Garner.

Informed persons said Garner would appoint Senator Davis, Republican, Pennsylvania, as soon as the situation had "cooled off."

Davis was understood to be willing to serve despite the campaign for re-election which will engage some of his time this summer.

Senators Schwartz, Democrat, Wyoming; Brown, Democrat, New Hampshire; and Frazier, Republican, North Dakota, already have agreed to serve.

Laughs Wait Moving Picture Goers
In Three Comedies Opening TodayHepburn, Grant Star at Fox While Edward G. Robinson Plays at Paramount; "Paradise for Three" Starts at Grand Theater.

Laughs await theatergoers at their favorite motion picture houses this week. Three of the main shows opening today are essentially comedies and top-notch comedians enliven dramas at the Rialto and Capitol.

Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant chase a leopard over the New England states in "Bringing Up Baby" at the Fox. Edward G. Robinson checks his "gats" and enters society and a comedian's role in "A Slight Case of Murder" at the Paramount, while Frank Morgan and Edna Mae Oliver present delightful comedy in the Swiss Alps as they seek "Paradise for Three" at the Grand. Lew Ayres stars in "King of the Newsboys" at the Rialto.

"Mr. Moto's Gamble" is another in the series of detective mysteries in which Peter Lorre stars. It opens Sunday at the Capitol billed with a stage show featuring Bobby Henshaw, an old-time vaudeville favorite. The Georgia tomorrow is bringing back the hit musical, "The Goldwyn Follies."

Both the Fox and the Grand are offering previews at 11:30 o'clock tomorrow night of excellent shows. The Grand is showing "The Adventure of Marco Polo," starring Gary Cooper, and the Fox is offering "In Old Chicago," with Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Tyrone Power.

"PARADISE FOR THREE"
OPENS TODAY AT GRAND

"Paradise for Three," opening today at Loew's Grand, is a lively comedy with romance, scenery and well-known comedians. In the featured roles are Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, Robert Young, Edna Mae Oliver, Mary Astor and Reginald Owen.

Morgan plays the role of a rich German who, under an assumed name, wins a free vacation in Switzerland. He sends Owen, his butler, to impersonate him while he seeks solitude. This does not suit the plans of his daughter, Florence Rice, who tips the hotel off to the scheme, but they make a mistake, think Young is Morgan and lavish the best the hotel has to offer on the broke professor while Morgan is pushed back into a servant's room.

Things continue to get mixed up and Florence and the professor fall in love. Swiss scenery adds to the picture.

KATHARINE HEPBURN
STARS AT FOX

In striking contrast to her dramatic triumph, "Stage Door," is Katharine Hepburn's comedy, portrayal in "Bringing Up Baby," which opens today at the Fox theater. Co-starred in the farce is Gary Grant.

The story centers around a wilful heiress attempts to rear a baby leopard and win the man of her choice, who happens to be Grant, a bespectacled zoologist engaged to marry another girl on the day following his meeting with Miss Hepburn.

No situation is too absurd for the talents of the stars, it seems, as once Hepburn rips her skirt in a crowded night club and walks ahead unsuspectingly. In the supporting cast are Charlie Ruggles, Barry Fitzgerald, May Robson and Walter Catlett.

TENTATIVE OKAY
GIVEN W. & A. PLANDiscount of Rials-Warrants to Meet Needs of State Hospital Program.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, April 7.—After a conference today with Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Edgar B. Dunlap, of Gainesville, manager for the federal agency in Georgia, announced that tentative approval had been given the proposal for discounting warrants of the state-owned W. & A. railroad as a means of financing the new $5,000,000 state hospital program authorized by the legislature.

It was determined W. & A. warrants will only be eligible for discount to a point of meeting the needs of financing the state hospital, or approximately $1,620,000. This is due to a provision in the loan extension act requiring that loans be for the purpose of encouraging the employment of labor.

It was a part of the general program adopted by the legislature to use proceeds of the warrants for the six-year period from 1944 to 1949, inclusive, in aiding the county schools and courts.

With the money to be secured from the RFC, Rivers and the State Welfare Board plan to match other funds obtained from the federal Works Progress Administration in building the new state hospital.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(P)—John J. Nosovitsky, a private detective, sued Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, Lindbergh kidnapping go-between, for $200,000 today, charging Condon had repeatedly accused him publicly of being implicated in the crime.

The complaint said that on April 22, 1937, Condon, a retired Bronx school principal, said in the presence of three men that Nosovitsky was the main instigator of the kidnapping, the mysterious "J. J. Faulkner" who took some of the ransom money to a bank.

The detective said a Hunterdon county, N. J., grand jury exonerated him of such charges in September, 1937.

St. Louis Visitor Returns Here After Absence of 27 Years

By Sally Forth.

THE arrival here of charming Mrs. Wilbur T. Trueblood to visit Miss Ella May Thornton, provides the inspiration for her reunion with friends who grew up with the visitor from St. Louis. Mrs. Trueblood is the former Miss Kate Lee, daughter of the late Dr. James W. Lee, who was pastor of Trinity Methodist church for many years, and she is the sister of the late Ivy Lee, who was acclaimed one of America's greatest minds in matters economic and financial.

Twenty-seven years have passed since Mrs. Trueblood visited Atlanta, and of course she is amazed at the development and growth of the city in which she spent her girlhood. She grew up with her hostess, Mrs. Robert Gregg; Mrs. Charles Dannals; Mrs. R. T. Dorsey and Mrs. Charles A. Dana, of New York, who made their debuts the same year as did Mrs. Trueblood.

As the first vice president of the Wednesday Club, the largest literary organization in St. Louis, which has a membership of 600 women, Mrs. Trueblood centers all of her interest in the activities of this club. She belongs to the Artists' Guild, of which painters, singers and writers make up the club roster. Her only son, Wilbur Trueblood Jr., who is majoring in psychology at Princeton University, is visiting his roommate, Ben Osburn, on Chatham road.

Mrs. Trueblood will motor to Tallulah Falls today to visit the famous school built on Cherokee mountain, which is owned and operated by Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. The trip to the school will fulfill a desire of many years' standing with Mrs. Trueblood, who has heard about the important place Tallulah Falls school occupies in the hearts of Georgians.

CENTERING interest among the younger married contingent this week is the presence of Mrs. Paul Sanger, of Charlotte, N. C., the former Mary Ann Carr, and her sister, Mrs. Edward Friendly, of Warrenton, Va., the former Nancy Carr, who have arrived to visit their mother, Mrs. Clark Howell, at her home on Peachtree road.

Mary Ann was accompanied by her husband, Dr. Sanger, who came to Atlanta to attend a medical meeting and returned on Wednesday to Charlotte. Mary Ann and Nancy will leave for home on Sunday.

THE charming presence of Mrs. Raymond A. Kline has been keenly missed from social affairs of recent date, due to her illness the past five weeks with undulant fever. Mrs. Kline has been confined to her home on Peachtree-Battle avenue and attending physicians have not deemed it wise to allow her to see visitors.

Now, however, Sally is delighted to inform you that Mrs. Kline is well on the road to recovery, and her friends, who are legion, may again have the pleasure and privilege of a visit with her.

LEAVING the end of this month for a delightful motor trip through the gardens of Virginia will be the party composed of Mrs. Fritz Orr, Mrs. Colquitt Carter, Mrs. Everard Richardson Jr. and Mrs. Joe Brennan, who plan to make their departure on April 24.

The party will motor to Charlotte, N. C., where they will visit friends for a day and night and hope to be joined there by Mrs. Stanton Pickens, who will continue the trip with them.

These attractive matrons will spend a week enjoying the gardens of Virginia before starting home again. Mrs. Orr, however, does not expect to return to Atlanta with her fellow travelers, but will leave them at Charlottesville and go to Bronxville, N. Y., to visit her sister.

RICH'S Easter Coat Purchase!

Mrs. John Holmes, and make the acquaintance of the latest addition to her family, small John Holmes Jr.

AN EXCITED group of youngsters is awaiting the annual Easter egg hunt to be given this afternoon at Wingfield, the estate of former Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, on Peachtree road, by the members of St. Luke's Episcopal church. No doubt the three children who are anticipating the event with greatest enthusiasm are Joe and Ed Hamilton and Preston Stevens Jr.

And this is why. Last year Joe and Ed, who are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, found the golden egg at the hunt. As a prize, the boys were given two ducks, and they were so thrilled that they kept the pets and began what they now call their "duck farm." This afternoon the brothers are going after the golden egg again, for the prize this year will also be a pair of ducks and they want to add to their farm.

Preston, on the other hand, wants the rabbit prize at today's party. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Stevens, he won a rabbit last year as the prize for finding the greatest number of eggs. Since then, however, the rabbit has met with a tragic end, and now Preston wants another to fill its place.

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.—A dinner was given last night to celebrate the fifth birthday of the CCC camps and I went to read a message from the President. I was very happy to be able to spend a few minutes with the people who have made this nation-wide program possible, for I feel the work of the CCC camps has enriched many communities.

Aside from the fact that it has taken boys who might have drifted into evil ways and kept them busy during critical months, it has given them better health and a skill with which to face the world. Some day we will have fewer floods because of the trees which the CCC has planted, better soil because of the soil erosion program which they have helped to carry on, and innumerable improvements which can be seen everywhere throughout the country.

After I left the dinner, I went to the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra concert, which was as beautiful as it could possibly be. I am sure that both the orchestra and Mr. John Charles Thomas, who sang several numbers with them, must have realized how much the audience enjoyed them. I have rarely heard a Washington audience applaud more warmly. I returned to find our son, Franklin Jr., had just arrived. He was talking to his father and had not decided whether he would stay the night and rise early to drive to Charlottesville, or whether he would proceed at once. In my most organizing spirit, I started to make his plans for him. He looked at me with the funniest expression and said: "I don't like being organized. I'm going to flip a coin."

The coin decided that he would go, but he finally stayed. We had breakfast together this morning at 7 o'clock before he started for Charlottesville and some law work.

It is good to be reminded every now and then of the bad habits which come with age. Grown persons do not like to have their minds made up for them. They like to arrive at a decision on their own volition. We mothers have a dreadful tendency to behave as though no one in the world could manage except ourselves.

Miss Rachel M. Palmer, who has just flown to Manila in five days and spent seven weeks in the Philippines before flying back, came to see me this morning. She brought gifts from the Sultana of Sulu, Sulu, Philippine Islands. One of them is a very beautiful example of brass work, dug up not long ago, which is at least 300 years old. It is extremely interesting to me, for its decoration reminds me somewhat of some Persian pieces which my father brought home many years ago when he went around the world at the age of 21.

Several old friends of mine are coming to lunch and later this afternoon I am flying to New York city.

SUSPENDER DRESS FOR JUNIOR SIZES.

Is there anything in the world more becoming to slim young things in the 11 to 19 size range than the suspender dress? And right now this charming style is riding on a crest of new popularity. This pattern is just grown-up enough to please a young miss, and yet just as youthful as her mother wants her to look. It's just as smart as it can be, and so easy to make that it offers a fine chance for the juniors to do a little sewing on their own. A complete and detailed sew chart accompanies the pattern, and makes everything easy.

Note, especially, the corset effect at the waistline, that narrows into a belt in the back. Make up this pattern with a print frock and plain blouse as pictured, or with a plain frock and print blouse. It is charming in a wide choice of fabrics—silk crepe for blouse and jumper both, linen or pique jumper with orandy or dotted Swiss blouse, shantung jumper with blouse of handkerchief linen or dimity.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1507-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Corresponding bust measurements 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 (31) requires 17-8 yards of 39-inch material for the blouse and 2-1-2 yards for the jumper.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

Mrs. Roosevelt Buys 2 Outfits For Her Easter

New York, April 7.—(P)—In less time than it takes most women to buy a pair of gloves, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today bought two Easter costumes.

She chose a fair weather outfit, and one to wear should the day be stormy.

Her fair weather hat is a navy blue sailor of shiny straw with a rolled, medium brim and crown, both edged with white pique.

With it goes a navy blue costume suit of sheer silk, with a white blouse and a three-quarter length coat trimmed with a white pique lapel flower.

She'll wear white gloves with it, and carry a white handbag.

The rainy weather outfit is a

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD
Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield in care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: My husband is in love with another woman and admits it, and I am so numb with pain that I really don't know whether or not I love him. We seldom speak to one another except to keep up appearances before other people and you can imagine what a hell our home is. We have four children and I try to hold our standard of living up to what it always has been. He wants me to divorce him but says I cannot have the children so I have done nothing about it. Miss Chatfield, you will tell me to examine myself. I have done this and while I am not perfect I don't think I brought this on myself. Please help me to make a wise decision.

DEJECTED.

Answer: Just for argument's sake, let's suppose that you aren't accessory before the fact of your husband's detour, but merely an innocent victim of it. Are you not willing to do all in your power to make the detour short and save him before he's bogged beyond help? You have a great many good reasons for bringing him back and there's every reason to believe you can succeed; yet you are throwing away your opportunity.

Sad to say, it's not unusual for a married man to imagine himself in love with another woman than his wife; but the large majority of these deluded men come out of the mist and realize that it's just, not love, they are experiencing. The speed with which they come out depends largely on the way their wives treat them when they are harboring such delusions.

I know that while you are stung with humiliation and anger at the spot you've been put in, it's hard for you to use your head. When there's hell in your heart, you're tempted to let it out in your home. But, friend, if you don't use your head, you won't be able to write a happy ending to your story.

Paradoxically, your husband is quite as unhappy as you are; for he loves his children and he doesn't want to lose them. He's whistling in the graveyard when he tells you he will take them. Courts don't give custody of children to fathers on detour. Moreover, he probably loves you but doesn't realize it while this madness is upon him. He's conscious smitten and he's frightened of the future.

Don't you see he's in dire need of your sympathy? Make him feel that you are his friend. Let him understand that you are fighting with him, not against him, fighting to save him and yourself and the children and the home. You can be his friend in need if you will turn on the charm, turn off the tears, forget the martyr mood and treat him as a peer rather than as a criminal. For whatever reason he left the straight and narrow, this is the only way to lure him back and it will be worth all it costs you to make the effort.

TAP YOUR WAY TO POPULARITY; LEARN IN EASY HOME LESSONS

An easy little tap dance that Jill taught herself! But since she did her phone rings like mad—with bids for parties, outings, dances.

Take a leaf from Jill's book. You can quickly learn from diagrams how to make the six basic tap sounds—and they're all you use in tap dancing no matter how tricky you may get at it.

Speed comes quickly as you practice and when you snap fingers, clap hands, swing it—your dances go over with a bang.

Our 40-page booklet, Self-Instruction in Tap Dancing, takes you quickly from basic steps to full-length dance, waltz and military routines. Diagrams, instructions. How to fit steps to music.

Here's Something in Your Hat

For the Easter Season

By LILLIAN MAE

The Easter bunny is looking around for tricks. He told me so himself, as he confided to me one of the neatest yet. In fact, he had this one last year, but inasmuch as he picked it up rather late, he considers it is still original and is using it in a big way this season. Here it is:

It's an Easter bonnet which I defy convention to denounce as the perfect gift "from him to her." The demure flat-crowned, large-brimmed hat of natural straw, with its generous ribbon bow and cluster of varicolored spring flowers is packed in a bandbox which is just too cute. When the "trap-door" crown is lifted, lo and behold, there are three flacons of

Bridge Lite

By HAROLD SHARPSTEEN

BRIDGE PRIMER.

Modern contract bridge bidding methods today have been reduced to a plane within easy reach of almost everybody. With a little directed effort, youngsters of high school age quickly catch on to the swing of the game. Spritely oldersters, a little tardy in beginning, are turning to contract these days for mental recreation.

Oldsters generally prefer to take their bridge to lead you, step-by-step, up the winding road to Bridge Olympus... no coupons, boxtops, labels or facsimiles required.

Lesson No. 1.

The Culbertson system probably continues the most widely played of all contract bidding methods. Learning to bid is like learning to speak a new language. The alphabet of bridge is the honor-trick table, setting up value for high cards of the deck. The aces, kings, queens, jacks and tens.

A deal of four hands usually finds these high cards fairly well distributed around the table. Some appear singly... others in pairs or more in the same suit. All are given precise valuations in the Culbertson honor-trick table as follows:

Same Suit	Value
A K	2 H. T.
A Q
K Q J	1½ H. T.
K J 10
K Q	1 H. T.
A J
K J x	½ H. T.
Q J x
K x

Value Kx and Qx held in different suits is 1 H. T.—Qx and Kx in different suits at 1-2 H. T. Any singleton King; guarded Queen; Jack held with a higher honor, as A J x, gives a plus value.

Memorize the Table. Deal out four hands. Follow the above honor-trick table to determine the total count of each hand... any Ace-Queen in the same suit equals 1-2 H. T., any K Q J equals 1-2 H. T., and so on.

With pencil and pad record the total number of honor-tricks found in each hand... the combined count of the entire deal... Reshuffle the cards and re-count the hands.

'Til next Friday, beginners... and in the meantime master the honor-trick table. To old-timers, who knew, but strung along anyway.

'Til tomorrow.

PLEASANT HOMES

By ELIZABETH M'RAE BOYKIN.

BELOW EYE LEVEL.

Another forgotten man. Forgotten men are still turning up. Or rather stooping down. Trying to achieve a straight part or negotiate a collar button with the help of a mirror that's just the right height for the little lady but far below the eye level of a fellow who was star basket ball center in his dear old golden rule days.

Revolutionizing the Room. Ruth has just thought of that, after never noticing for so long that the dresser just wasn't the right size for Roger at all. So she's revolutionized the whole bedroom to make it a bit more mansize.

The first thing she did was to take the mirror off the dresser and hang it on the wall at Roger's height. Next she cleared all her stuff out of the drawers and gave them all over to Roger with a grand gesture. Then bought her a dressing table with a triple wing mirror—the whole thing draped to her heart's desire and sacred to her bottles and fancy jars. For her own drawer space she acquired a highboy, quite a handsome one, too, which will also hold sewing oddsments that she needs to keep in this room. The addition of a full length wall mirror is a boon for both.

Even in colors she has kept in mind the fact that a man, as well as a woman, lives here. So she had a fine deep purple rug for the floor, then had the walls done in a light gray. Pale gold sheer curtains, red for the easy chairs (two of them) and an interesting gray herringbone fabric for the bedspread give the room a well-groomed and custom-tailored look that any man would like. And any woman who has a way with tweeds and sweaters. Which Ruth definitely has.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

VITAMIN B AND INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

The other day one of the new bureaus released a story which conveyed to the unsophisticated reader the idea that some great doctor or scientific investigator has discovered that vitamin B prevents infantile paralysis. According to the story a similarity between the symptoms and signs of beriberi (polynuria), due to extreme deficiency of vitamin B, and some of the symptoms or signs in the early stage of infantile paralysis had suggested that vitamin B might be helpful in preventing and curing infantile paralysis, too.

Unlike many such atrocities, however, this particular story is quite harmless, I should say. In fact it may do some good, indirectly, by encouraging a few timid folk to increase their intake of vitamin B, particularly the daily intake of their children, who need it most.

How much vitamin B does a child or an adult need daily? No one can say precisely how many units, but at present good nutrition authorities estimate that the vitamin B requirement varies with the energy requirement, and the more play or exercise the more calories he or she requires and the more vitamin B to maintain good carbohydrate metabolism. For the average adult of sedentary habit or one doing light work a fair daily ration for vitamin B would be 30 units for each 100 calories in the diet. An optimal ration of vitamin B (that is, more than just enough to prevent outspoken symptoms of deficiency) for such a person would be 40 to 50 units for each 100 calories.

Every ounce of plain wheat—the kind that grows and that one can actually buy by the pound, peck or bushel from farmer, mill or feed store or seed store if one pretends it is just a little something to feed the partridges or the pigeons—contains 60 units of vitamin B. Every ounce of wheat germ, the heart of the kernel, discarded in milling flour, contains 350 units of vitamin B.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

No Cost Data.

Kindly recommend a doctor who can remove freckles and liver spots by the method you described, carbon dioxide method, about what the treatment will cost. (Mrs. H. H.)

Answer—I am glad to recommend a competent dermatologist in your city or the nearest one I know, but I cannot give any information about fees, costs or expenses.

Deficient Diet.

I have been on a liquid diet for several weeks for stomach trouble, and a strict diet for months before that. I have developed neuritis lately. (M. H. B.)

Answer—Any physician who prescribes any form of dietary restriction, no matter what for, owes it to the patient's welfare to see to it that the diet is properly supplemented with adequate daily rations of vitamins. If your trouble is neuritis it is quite likely due to prolonged deficiency of vitamin B. The physician who neglects this precaution, in the light of our present knowledge, does not give his patient fair or proper treatment. Every patient requires not less than 30 units of vitamin B for each 100 calories in the diet. A pint of milk yields 325

DESIGNER OF STOCKINGS FOR STARS TELLS YOU HOW TO BUY.

Can you imagine wearing a pair of $100 stockings? Most of us feel uneasy in our best pair of $2 sheers!

Marlene Dietrich, Eleanor Powell and Ginger Rogers pay fabulous prices for hose that increase the beauty of their famous legs. They buy more than quality. They pay for an artist's knowledge of the colors and designs that make legs more beautiful.

We are constantly agog at the amazing things Hollywood does to gild the lily, and we are always on the lookout to borrow some of their best tricks. Nobody except a star could afford to have stockings designed for her, but you can find a pair that will look as though they were made just for you. Willys, of Hollywood, who, for the last 15 years has been creating and designing hosiery of sheer delight for the stars, has been generous enough to take time out to explain the secrets of selecting the hose that make the average pair of legs more attractive.

My first question was what kind of hose make large ankles appear slim, and I learned that the conservative woman with large ankles and calves should always wear the darker shades. The style-conscious woman with stout ankles and calves should wear a pointed heel stocking or a wide crotch stocking, as those two features tend to break up the width of the ankle and give it a slimmer appearance.

The short, stocky woman should wear a mesh hose with a horizontal-line effect to give her width and depth. The short girl with thin ankles should wear a stocking with a very low heel, as a low heel will show more of her ankle and give it the needed width. Also, as this hosiery fashion genius pointed out, the seamless stocking is ideal for the short girl with thin ankles. The woman who possesses trim ankles and calves should confine her buying to light shades or shades as near the color of her skin as possible.

One of the cleverest tricks in stocking design is to graduate the colors from light in front to a darker brown at the back seam. These stockings were created for Ginger Rogers and Marlene Dietrich and are described as "ombre colored." The idea is that such shading helps to streamline the legs.

But it takes more than clever design to streamline legs. As a group, it is the tap dancers of Hollywood who have the beautiful legs, according to this authority in sizes and measurements. So, if calories and approximately 140 units of vitamin B. Most refined starchy foods yield little or no vitamin B. Plain wheat contains 60 units in the ounce. Wheat germ, 350 units in the ounce. Dried pasteurized brewer's (not baker's) yeast contains 800 or more units of vitamin B in the ounce.

you are anywhere under 50 and want to beautify your legs, to say nothing of your figure, go right out and take tap dancing. It is my firm belief that all children should be given dancing lessons, for dancing legs are lovely.

The special exercises for the correction of leg defects are of two types, stretching and contracting. Thick legs can be slimmed with stretching movements in which the heels are pointed, pulling the calf muscles out long and smooth. Underdeveloped legs can be filled out and given loveliness with contracting exercises, which are performed on the toes. You will find both types of exercises in the leaflet, "Leg Normalizing Exercises."

Miss Sarah Fitzpatrick Becomes Bride of Jesse Edwin Davis Jr.

Miss Sarah Fitzpatrick became the bride of Jesse Edwin Davis Jr. at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at a ceremony taking place at the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church with Dr. Ryland Knight officiating. Mrs. Charles Chalmers, organist, presented an appropriate musical program.

The altar was banked with palms and ferns and centered with a floor basket of Easter lilies. On each side of the altar, seven-branched candelabra held burning white tapers.

Ushers were Arch W. Fitzpatrick and Robert B. Shelley. Miss Eunice Howmon, of Mobile, Ala., was the bride's maid of honor, and only attendant. She wore a model of sea foam blue marquisette and lace fashioned with puffed sleeves and neckline finished in front with a shell pink alp.

She wore a shell pink leg-horn hat and her bouquet was of pastel shaded garden flowers tied with a shell pink ribbon.

The bride entered with her father, Littleton Hill Fitzpatrick, by whom she was given in marriage and they were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Marion T. Davis, who was his best man.

The bride was becomingly gowned in French nude satin made along princess lines, the full skirt of which lengthened to form a train in back. The long sleeves of the dress puffed at the shoulder and formed a point at the wrist. Her veil of French nude illusion tulle was caught to her hair by a Juliet cap of pearls and orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies. Her only ornament was a gold cross, an heirloom in the bride's family.

Mrs. Littleton Fitzpatrick, mother of the bride, was dressed in hyacinth blue lace worn with a matching hat and a shoulder spray of Joanna Hill roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Jesse Edwin Davis, mother of the groom, wore a model of black lace with matching hat and accessories and a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis left on a wedding trip immediately following the ceremony and on their return they will reside in Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. Davis chose for traveling a suit of beige crepe trimmed in London tan crepe and worn with London tan accessories and hat. Her coat was of beige wool with a fox collar.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were Miss Eunice Howmon and Mrs. George Howmon, of Mobile, Ala.; Miss Margaret Abercrombie, of Cedartown, Ga.; Misses Nannie Mae and Emma Worham, of Mrs. W. K. Abercrombie, of Culloden, Ga.; Mrs. Hartford Green and Miss Henrietta Green, of Zebulon, Ga.

The campaign chairman requested that old newspapers, magazines, clothing and discarded furniture be given to others less fortunate. She said a Salvation Army truck would call for such items if residents would call Captain Strandburg at Jackson 2224.

Dr. Herman L. Turner, pastor of the Covenant Presbyterian church, in speaking of the clean-up campaign, said:

Quality of Cleanliness.
"There is one quality above everything else that marks a city as a good city—a place in which people are proud to live and call their home—and that is the quality of cleanliness."

"The good city is clean in spirit, which means that it has wise laws effectively and justly administered, respected by citizens who see them as rules of conduct by which we all live more happily together. It means the good city has strong churches for the worship of God and the spiritual development of the people. It means it has active clubs in which people come together to discuss ways to improve their surroundings and initiate movements to make their city a better place in which to live and bring up their families."

She goes out whenever she pleases, happy and charming because she feels well—a modern girl who has discovered the secret of CARDUI.

For Cardui benefits women in two ways. As an antispasmodic, it relieves the functional discomfort of monthly periods. As a tonic, Cardui helps to strengthen the entire system by improving the appetite and digestion. Medical authorities acknowledge the great value of the plants blended in Cardui for these purposes.

If you suffer from functional periodic pain, if you do not enjoy the food you eat and obtain proper nutrition from it, then try CARDUI by all means. Your druggist has it.

Easter on a Budget

One can achieve the reputation for great chic by the careful assembling of one's accessories. Here are some of the smartest at very little cost. Make your old black or navy dress look like new by adding an abbreviated dusty pink bolero. It is of bengaline with soutache embroidery and costs about $6.

When you can get luxurious Russian sable dyed Kolinsky scarfs at about $5 a skin, it is an opportunity you should not miss. These scarfs come in flattering arrangements of two to six skins. Brighten up your costume with several bunches of white daisies. They cost about 60c a bunch. Carry a white alligator calf bag. Priced about $3.

A lucky purchase for you will be these doeskin gloves at about $1.50. The roomy black patent leather bag is about $1.80 and the patent sandals about $4.

good anytime from now on, but if you haven't bought one yet, remember to get one that will look nice later with that large brimmed natural leghorn hat—which is an absolute necessity for any summer wardrobe.

And speaking of breaking into print—have you noticed how the school girls home for the Easter holidays have been written up in the papers—and how they have appeared in prints at so many of the parties? The girls here are already packing their bags for their return to school with all manner of prints, checks, stripes, dots and plaits.

Some of them can't resist wearing divine new prints of fruit design—have you seen them? Some of them were very much in evidence at one of the hotel dances this week. The school belle who admitted that the dress was brand-new to take back to school with her, had to wear it. She has one with pale blue background, and another of muted brown. These two shades go so well with the newest accessories and are destined to be fashion's favorites of the season.

Have you seen the outfits featuring white and black circus designs? Or those of black background with pink and white snails crawling all over?

With the bridal season right upon us, it was noted during the past week that many of the future matrons here were wearing articles from their trousseau to parties honoring them. And though of course, we think of brides in white, it was noticeable and attractive too, to see them wearing all black—but the blacks they wore; they were the fashion "firsts."

A careful check revealed that most of the brides of the season have included black net as favorite dresses. The black nets this season are more attractive than ever and offset with small or large clusters of pastel-shaded flowers, the outfits become smart indeed. Shirtings and tuckings on the waists lift the dresses from the tailored category so stylish last season. Short puff sleeves give an added air of feminine charm to the dresses, while a ribbon belt in dusty pink or blue gives a romantic touch. These dresses it was noted, were worn this week with small hats completely covered with flowers, or with small-sized sailors trimmed in ribbons and veils, which not only added a smart appearance to the wearer, but were very appropriate for the sudden gusts of wind which seem to arrive unheralded and which play such havoc with milady's waves.

Hollywood Looking Glass

"A woman buying a spring coat should give the subject as much thought as a designer does when he creates one," says Orry-Kelly, Warner Brothers' famous designer.

"First of all," he continues, "she should consider the color. What is most becoming to her and what will harmonize with the largest number of popular accessory colors? If she can have two coats, beige and navy blue would be a wise choice. Black, brown and shades of tan will harmonize with beige while greys, wines and all of the pastels are lovely with navy. Both of these basic colors are leaders this spring.

"Next, she should consider the general silhouette. If she is tall the two-third length boxy types should be good on her. We did several of these for Rosalind Russell in 'Four's a Crowd' and one for Kay Francis in 'Secrets of an Actress.' If a girl is below normal height she would do well to choose a moderately slim seven-eighths length model, or a fitted full-length. However the more popular coats are not quite dress length.

"Fabric is the next thought. For sports or town wear she should turn to the rougher materials, such as tweeds and nubby wools, or the polo cloths. For dressier occasions the spongy fabrics are important as well as wool crepes and such novelty materials as a Rodier cloth we used in a full-skirted coat for Gloria Dickson to wear in 'Four's a Crowd.' This had a grey background with tufted yarn stripes.

"As for dressmaker detail, the chic woman will notice these things about current spring coats . . . few of them have buttons . . . few of them have collars . . . many have unpressed lapels . . . many have front tuxedo reversers of fur or fabric . . . some have bracelet-length sleeves . . .

Hopping About Hollywood in the Rain . . . Margaret Lindsay, wearing a transparent hood and cape over a plaid sports coat, having engine trouble in Dark Canyon which leads to Warner Brothers' studio, where the "When Were You Born?" company was waiting for her to go to work . . . Jane Bryan had the presence of mind to have a big rubberized envelope into which she could slip her handbag, thus protecting it from the torrents . . .

You don't have to spend a lot to be one of the smartest in the Easter parade. These days it is remarkable what really smart clothes you can find for very little money. The Atlanta shops are full of such clothes. We found the copper-colored chiffon, shown at the top, printed in tiny white flowers. It is called a twin print with its redingote top and slip of the same print. It is bound in grosgrain ribbon of the same shade, and has a cluster of green peppers on the shoulder. The price is about $11.

A navy marquisette with pink pique collar is sketched at left. It has a shirred, tucked waist, trimmed with narrow taffeta bands and costs about $7.

An ideal jacket dress for women is this cool black and white Bemberg print at right. It has a cluster of daisies at the neck, and is priced about $7.

SEEN 'ROUND ABOUT ATLANTA

By JACQUELINE GREENE.

Atlantans stole a march in the Easter fashion parade this week. The brilliant spring weather, the affairs marking the social calendar brought out the latest in feminine finery—and a grand forecast of what to expect in the Easter picture.

One of the prettiest of the brides-elect of spring was glimpsed last week in the most heavenly hat. Very wide-brimmed corn-colored straw, it simply spelled romance and femininity. The only trimming was a huge cluster of pastel-shaded flowers on the center of the crown, which, by the way was very, very flat.

There seems to be a romantic theme in all the hats which create a festive and picturesque effect. Flowers and veils, although sufficient without the aid of the other, found their way to the headlines many times this week, and it was surprising to note the many different, yet attractive models which the girls have been wearing to the parties.

Have you noticed one of the loveliest girls in town who is noted for her chic appearance at all times, her hat which features a wide brim and pointed crown? These pointed crowns may be the Seven Drarf influence, but whatever, they give a smart happy-go-lucky appearance to any costume. So many of the girls—and they don't all love sailors—wear them, and they look so jaunty—especially when a flimsy veil is tied around the crown—or the edge of the brim, for that matter. One girl here, who is the truly feminine type, wears a bonnet these days, and she wears a veil with it in the manner of the off-the-face fashion. When the hat turns up from the forehead, the tendency is to place the veil over the entire face and let it hang loosely to the shoulders.

Although it's still a bit too cool to discard top coats entirely, the snappiest looking sport clothes have been seen recently. The two-piece suits in pastel shades are arrestingly smart and are very good for golfing these sunshiny days. Many of the girls seen last week at a meeting of one of the many circles working for the Tallulah Falls school wore the most colorful combinations in the knit sport lines. Some of the suits matched, while others were "last minute combinations." By this we mean that perhaps an outfit consisted of a skirt of one color and a blouse or sweater of another. Some of the one-color suits were offset by three-cornered scarves. And here is a fashion tip for you—the more unusual and the more complicated you can wear your scarf—do it. It not only attracts attention but it gives your outfit that zip which is so necessary.

At one of the garden club meetings this week, it was hard to tell which was gayer—the members, or the flowers. Those gay prints with dark background are simply grand for this season of the year. The floral prints are

Miss Laura Baxter Maddox Weds Mr. Smith at Brilliant Ceremony

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD D. SMITH JR.

Descending a church aisle outlined with tall silver standards topped with clusters of Easter lilies and burning white tapers, Miss Laura Baxter Maddox, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foster Maddox, became the bride of Edward Devereux Smith Jr. last evening at a brilliant ceremony solemnized at the First Methodist church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and the Rev. Dr. Edward G. Mackay, pastor of the church, read the marriage service which assembled fashionable Atlanta society in the names of two of its most popular members.

In a setting of elaborate beauty within the church, the wedding tableau formed against a backdrop of fern trees which massed the choir loft to the rear of the altar. The foliage was interspersed with triangular-shaped candelabra holding white tapers, the bases of the candles caught with clusters of Easter lilies and the candelabra linked together with garlands of smilax. The altar rail, which was covered with a white satin draped festooned with garlands of asparagus ferns, was centered with a mound of Easter lilies and white gladioli out of which arose a slender silver staff topped with a mound of lilies and gladioli.

The bridal party ascended to a raised platform, the edge of which was caught at intervals with tall clusters of Easter lilies, connected by garlands of asparagus fern. The bridal couple knelt for their vows on a white satin-covered priedieu ornamented with clusters of Easter lilies tied with white satin ribbons. Flanking either side of the prie-dieu was a trio of tall, single brass candlesticks holding candelabra holding the bases concealed with Easter lilies tied with gleaming white satin bows.

Adorning the steps leading to the raised dais were white Grecian urns filled with Easter lilies. The balcony rail was marked with groups of white burning tapers, the bases of which were sheathed in lilies and caught together with ropes of smilax.

Mrs. Foster Spain, organist of the church, presented a program of music while the wedding guests assembled. Her selections included "Intermezzo" from the opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana," which was played at the wedding of the bride's parents and is a favorite with the bride and her mother.

Wedding Personnel. Acting as ushers were James F. Alexander, Robert F. Maddox Jr., James L. Dickey, William H. Kiser, James D. Robinson, Richard Hull, former Governor John M. Clayton, and Judge J. T. Stokely, of Birmingham, Ala.

Addison Smith was his brother's best man, and the groomsmen included John Pidcock, Philip Alston Jr., James Kenan, Baxter Maddox, the bride's brother; James Franklin, John Pollard Turman, Dr. R. C. Davis, and Clifford Killam, of Laredo, Texas.

Mrs. Robert F. Maddox Jr. was her sister's matron of honor, and the bridesmaids included Miss Eunice Holderness, of St. Louis, Mo., and Miss Emily Alsop, of Boca Raton, Fla., both cousins of the bride; Miss Eleanor Whitworth, of Nashville, Tenn., the groom's cousin; Misses Clare Haverty, Emily Smith, Helen Hill Hopkins, Elkin Goddard and Mrs. David McCullough.

Flesh-tinted marquisette over crisp flesh taffeta fashioned the charming costumes worn by the bride's attendants. Two rows of soft puffing banded the full skirts, the puffing being repeated on the short puffed sleeves and around the square necklines which were cut very low in the back. A deep tone of rose was introduced in the tone of rose was introduced in the belts of two-tone velvet ribbon which tied in bows in the back with the ends falling to the hemlines.

Mrs. Maddox Jr., the matron of honor, wore a gown of deep rose pink marquisette, similar in style to those worn by the bridesmaids. All of the attendants carried fan-shaped bouquets of roses which shaded from the light pink of rapture roses at the top to the deep rose tints of Better Times roses at the bottom. The bouquets were tied with light pink satin ribbons.

at an elaborate reception at the Piedmont Driving Club following the church ceremony in honor of their daughter and Mr. Smith.

Presenting a scene of floral beauty, the club decorations adhered to the bridal motif of white and green, except in the foyer where white Grecian urns were filled with coral pink gladioli, pink and yellow snapdragons, and blue iris.

In the ballroom, the stately white columns ranging the length of the room were draped from the arched ceiling to the floor with garlands of southern smilax. In the center of each arch hung a lantern covered with white cellophane. The receiving line, which included the hosts, the bride couple, the members of the wedding party and the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Smith, formed at the far end of the room beneath an arch banked with palms. Interspersing the palms were tall white columns topped with white Grecian urns filled with white gladioli, white snapdragons, and Easter lilies, from which fell graceful cascades of white sweet peas.

Supper was served from exquisitely appointed tables placed on either side of the ballroom. Covered with white cellophane, the tables featured in the center five-branched silver candelabra holding white tapers, the bases of the candles tied with clusters of valley lilies. Flanking either side of the candelabra were handsome silver wine coolers filled with Easter lilies, white roses and snapdragons. Garlands of southern smilax formed a delicate tracery over the cellophane cloths.

In the loggia the ceiling lights were veiled in festoons of smilax, and the corners and doorways were massed with palms. Punch was served from bowls surrounded by wreaths of white snapdragons, roses and valley lilies. The entrance to the ballroom was marked by white floor vases of Easter lilies silhouetted against groups of palms.

Exquisite Bride's Table. The bride's table, placed in the club dining room, was covered with a white satin cloth and set entirely in silver, with the chairs sheathed in white satin. Gracing the center of the table was a ten-branched silver candelabra holding burning white tapers, and supporting in the center a silver bowl of Easter lilies and white lilies from which fell graceful cascades of sweet peas. The base of each candle was tied with a cluster of valley lilies, and surrounding the base of the candelabra was a wide band of white roses, valley lilies, lilies and sweet peas. At intervals, down the length of the table, were triangles formed of white sweet peas, lilies and valley lilies, a single silver candlestick holding a white taper arising from each corner of the triangles. Centering the lovely floral arrangements were silver compotes of hand-decorated mints. Between the triangles were tall silver vases filled with white lilies and snapdragons.

Marking the guests' places were small heart-shaped white wicker baskets filled with white candles, the hands formed of valley lilies tied with white tulle bows. Miniature white satin slippers filled with cigars and white satin bags filled with rose petals to be thrown at the bride couple also marked the covers.

The bride's gifts to her attendants were exquisite gold link bracelets, each bearing a small gold heart. One side of the heart was engraved with the initials M-S and the date of the wedding, and on the other side was the name of the girl to whom it was presented. Mr. Smith presented his groomsmen with silver bill clips initialed in gold.

Before being seated at the bride's table, the bride's attendants placed their bouquets in a frame cover of the bride, was dressed in white brocade satin, with a cluster of purple orchids contributing a color note. Mrs. Harrison S. Matthews, of Montgomery, aunt of the groom, wore pastel blue lace with a shoulder spray of orchids. Another of the groom's aunts, Mrs. J. T. Stokely, of Birmingham, was dressed in peach-colored chiffon, offset by a cluster of gardenias.

Mrs. Jack Glenn kept the bride's book. She was a lovely figure wearing a gown of white chiffon, the bodice encrusted in white beads.

The bridal couple left for New York from where they will sail on the Monarch of Bermuda for a honeymoon beneath the tropical skies of Bermuda. They will return to Atlanta for residence by May 1.

The bride chose for her traveling costume a smart navy blue wool dress which was worn with a full-length blue coat collared in blue fox. Her blue felt hat was untrammelled except for a blue veil.

Guests from a distance attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Holderness, of St. Louis; Clifford Killam, of Laredo, Texas; Miss Eleanor Whitworth, Charles B. Whitworth, Mrs. Robert F. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Jackson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Benedict, all of Nashville; Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Neilson and Miss Emily Alsop, of Boca Raton, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Jefferson and Baxter Jackson, of New York; Mrs. Fred Whitling and Mrs. Harrison S. WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Gay Hardwick, marooned in London with her Aunt Agatha while her parents are in Madeira depending a real estate lawsuit which may impoverish the family, has to answer the telephone five nights a week in the middle of a shamoo. It is Marcia Thrale, who is selling the next day to visit her Uncle George in a roundabout way at the fact that her sister Sylvia, who a year ago married the wealthy and much older Sir Francis Colesborough, is in "another jam" and wants to see Gay. Remembering their school days when it was she, not Marcia, who got Sylvia out of her many jams, Gay says she doesn't care if Marcia is selling the next day, she is not going to take over Sylvia's troubles. She rushes from Marcia's room but meets Sylvia in the corridor. Trapped, Gay returns with the blonde and very attractive Sylvia to find Marcia absent. Another round-about conversation reveals that there is no man connected with the jam. Sylvia produces two strips of paper evidently torn from newspapers on which, penciled in blue, were "Same place, same time. Same money" and "Tomorrow without fail or your husband will know." When Gay says Sylvia must tell her husband whatever the truth is, Sylvia pleads with her not to tell him. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT III

"It's the same thing," said Sylvia in a puzzled voice.

"You're very lucky if it is," said Gay with a wisdom beyond her years.

"But if it really is the same thing with Francis, then you haven't got to bother at all, because you can just go straight home and tell him, and he can deal with the blue pencil—stamp on it, or push its face in. Anyhow you won't have to bother any more."

Sylvia looked lovely and mournful. She shook her head.

"It wouldn't do at all, darling."

"Why wouldn't it?"

"Oh, it wouldn't. You don't know Francis."

Gay blew up. "Is that my fault? I keep asking you what he's like, and you're about as much use as a jelly that hasn't jelled! Why wouldn't it do to tell Francis?"

Sylvia appeared to reflect. The unusual effort brought a tiny line to her white brow.

"He'd be angry," she said at last.

"That won't hurt you," said Gay. "You'd much better tell him."

Sylvia shook her head again.

"I'll do it for you if you like," said Gay handsomely. "I could do it most awfully well, because I could begin by telling him that you were the world's prize fool and couldn't help getting into some mess or other. And then I could tell him about this particular mess—and of course he'd see that it was up to him to get you out of it."

Sylvia stood up, and stood trembling. It was as if she had begun to run away and then lost heart, or strength, or nerve—perhaps all three. She said with twitching lips:

"Don't tell him! Don't—don't!"

Gay came over to Sylvia and put her back in her chair.

"Sit down," she said, "and don't be an ass. To begin with, I don't know anything to tell, and to go on with—"

Sylvia clutched at her wrist.

"You mustn't tell Francis. If I could tell him, I wouldn't have come to you. Promise me you won't ever tell."

"I won't promise," said Gay soberly. "but I won't tell." She removed her wrist and stood back again.

"The question is, are you going to tell me? Because if you're not, I'll be getting along."

The faint, lovely color returned to Sylvia's cheek. She drew a long breath and sat back.

"Oh, darling, don't go! I want to tell you."

"Then go on with it," said Gay.

Sylvia looked up, and down again.

"It's so difficult. You see, one of the reasons I can't tell Francis is that he said I was never, never, never to play cards for money. They play a lot, you know, in his set, and the points are dreadfully high, and he said I wasn't to ever, because—well, it was after he'd been my partner one night at contract and we lost 800 pounds, and he said he wasn't a millionaire, and even if he were he couldn't bear the strain, and a lot of things like that."

Gay felt some sympathy for Francis Colesborough. She had played cards with Sylvia at school.

"Did you revoke?" she inquired with interest.

Sylvia gazed at her mournfully.

"I expect so—I generally do. I never can remember what it is exactly, but that is one of the things he said I'd done. So he said I wasn't to play again."

"And you did?"

"Not bridge—baccarat."

"And how much did you lose?"

It went without saying that Sylvia had lost.

"About 500 pounds," said Sylvia in a small, terrified voice—Sylvia, who though now the wife of the rich Sir Francis Colesborough and mistress of Cole Lester, had spent 21 years as penniless Sylvia Thrale with a widowed mother whose tiny pension had only just sufficed to feed and clothe herself and her two daughters. Relations had most unwillingly paid the school bills. Sylvia had therefore always heard a great deal about money—bills and the lack of money to pay them with; bills and the need of necessity of paying them; bills and the horrid things that might happen to you if you didn't pay them. All this had been impressed upon her in the nursery.

"What?" said Gay. And then, "But you'll have to tell Francis. He's the only person who can help you to pay 500 pounds."

Sylvia shook her head. "Oh, no, he isn't—that's just it."

Long practice enabled Gay to snatch meaning from this remark.

"You mean some one else gave you the money, and that's why you can't tell Francis?"

"Only half," said Sylvia, accepting this interpretation.

"This blue pencil creature?"

"I don't know."

Gay stamped her foot. "You don't know who gave you the money?"

"No, darling."

A kind of furious calm possessed Gay.

"Sylvia, if you don't tell me the whole thing right away, I'm off. Begin at the beginning and go right on to the end. You lost 500 pounds at baccarat. Now begin there!"

The line came again on Sylvia's forehead.

"Some one rang me up—"

"When?"

"Last week end—last Saturday—because we were going down to stay with the Wessex-Gardners. At least, I was going, and Francis was going to come if he could, and he did, only rather late for dinner—we were half through the fish."

Gay broke in. "Silly, for goodness sake—"

Sylvia stared in surprise. "So I know it was Saturday. And the bell rang while I was dressing, so it must have been about 5 o'clock."

"Good girl! Go on—keep on going."

MORE ABOUT JUPITER'S MOONS.

If Jupiter were a bright-shining sun, it would be the center of a little solar system of its own. Nine moons go around Jupiter, just as nine main planets go around our sun.

As it happens, Jupiter is a planet, not a sun. We can see it shining in the sky because it reflects light from the sun. The nine moons also reflect sunlight.

Where did Jupiter get those two little moons? We do not know for certain, but here is a theory:

The little moons may have been "captured" by Jupiter. They may be planetoids, or asteroids, which came within the reach of Jupiter's gravity.

If an exploding planet blew parts of itself (that is, asteroids) toward Jupiter, it is quite possible they were held there. The force of their motion when they were captured may be what keeps them moving in a direction opposite to Jupiter's other seven moons.

Jupiter and four of the nine moons.

As we said yesterday, two of Jupiter's moons are a little larger than the planet Mercury. Two others are about as big as the earth's moon.

There is an amazing fact about Jupiter's moons—they do not all move in the same direction! Let us suppose we looked down on Jupiter from a place about 20,000,000 miles above its north pole. Then we should see seven moons moving counter-clockwise, that is, opposite to the way a clock's hands move. The other two moons would be seen going clockwise.

What could have brought that to be? It is a hard question to

JACOBUS DENIES SARAZEN CHARGE OF FAVORITISM

P. G. A. Head Says Hagen Best Qualified and Most Popular.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(P)—George R. Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers' Association, returned from the south today with a soft denial to Gene Sarazen's charge that politics and favoritism kept him from being captain of the Ryder cup team.

Sarazen, at Augusta, Ga., coupled his attack upon Jacobus with announcement of his retirement from cup competition.

"I have known for some time that Sarazen resented not being selected for the Ryder cup captaincy by the P. G. A., but he did not tell me personally that it was the reason for his withdrawal," said Jacobus.

"As a matter of fact he insisted he had played in several international matches, that it was time the younger players got more chance, and that the trips were either too long or tiresome for him."

"I named Walter Hagen to captaincy of the 1937 Ryder cup team because I considered him the best qualified and most popular man for the position. On the way to England, where Hagen joined the team, I appointed Ed Dudley as acting captain, only for routine purposes."

"There was no prejudice against Sarazen, last year or at any other time. Hagen has been the logical man for the captaincy since the cup matches started, just as Francis Ouimet has become a standby as leader of the amateurs in Walker cup competition. I would not hesitate to name Hagen again, under similar circumstances."

The next Ryder cup matches, between British and American professionals, are due to be played in the United States in 1939.

U. S. G. A. Studies Exemption Plan

NEW YORK, April 7.—(P)—The United States Golf Association is thinking over a proposal to exempt former national open champions from sectional qualifying rounds, but can do nothing about it before this year's tournament in Denver, June 9-11.

The proposal arose over a report that Bobby Jones might try a comeback if exempt from qualifying play, but Jones has denied any interest in pushing such a rule modification.

Chief argument against the proposal at the moment is that it would cut the number of sectional qualifying places available in the championship field of 170 golfers.

As matters now stand, the top 30 finishers in the open each year are exempt from qualifying sectionally for the following year's tournament, and are automatically eligible to compete. In addition, the home club pro is also exempt, leaving 139 places for which the hundreds of golfing hopefuls throughout the country may compete by sections.

Battleship Calls on Blood of His Sire, Man o' War, To Win

LIVERPOOL, England (By Mail)—Today I saw Battleship, son of Man o' War, win the 100th running of the Grand National, greatest of all jumping races, run at Aintree, where since 1839 the race has been run.

I saw him make the last of the 30 jumps, a terrific thrust over water and fence of 15 feet, trailing the Irish horse, Royal Danieli, and then come on to win by half a head, while 300,000 or more people screamed and roared.

It was a great and gallant finish by the son of a great and gallant horse, a victory which did not come until four and a half miles had been run and 30 jumps made with 150 pounds on his back, and he, the little boss, just 15 hands, two inches high.

I stood and cheered him and looked at the old Stars and Stripes in the wind and thought of "Big Red" back there on the farm in Kentucky and of the Derby with War Admiral winning it—and who can blame me if there was, for a moment, a bit of mist in the eyes. Horses are grand things.

They said of this son of Big Red that he was too small to win. They said he could not make the 30 jumps. And one expert, the best in all England, said that Battleship likely would be in his element at Becher's brook or at Valentine's, they being full of water. Even his trainer said he feared the horse was too small. But they forgot that his blood was big.

He was behind when they hit "the flat" with the last jump behind. The big Irish horse, a grand one, too, Royal Danieli, was in front. But the tired little horse found something from the reservoir of Big Red—and came on to win. It was, in many years of looking at things in sport, the grandest finish to any race or game or contest I've ever seen.

There were those who thought that War Admiral was too small to win the Kentucky Derby. He wasn't. That was a mile and a quarter with 125 pounds up. I saw War Admiral win. And today I saw another son win, Battleship, the best one of them all.

A GREAT RACE—A GREAT DAY.

You could take the estimated 70,000 people who see the Kentucky Derby and remove that many from the crowd at Aintree and not notice the loss. They estimate more than a quarter of a million and it must be at least 300,000 who see the race.

It developed into a grand day after a morning of cold wind and rain. But by 1 o'clock it was perfect with a bright sun and a fine program of races.

The scene is a strange one to American eyes. There are windows for wagering. But the bookmakers with their umbrellas and their bags, set up in a row in front of the stand and cry out their odds. One walks up, tells his bet, which is registered by a "writer" in the book, and gets a numbered card. They have colorful names, some of the bookies.

There are champagne bars—literally barrels of champagne. There are beer bars and there are whisky bars and no one shows signs of it. There were tweeds. There were dialects. There were Indians with turbans, Frenchmen with beards, Irish with loud laughter and loud tweeds, royalty with the latest fashions, Lord Derby, whose name the English Derby bears and which

CRACKERS BEAT PETRELS, 12 TO 1, IN EASY CONTEST

Williams Leads 13-Hit Attack With Homer and Two Singles.

With several regulars resting and Manager Paul Richards doing such fancy things to the lineup as playing Marshall Mauldin at third and a pitcher and catcher in the outfield as the game went along, the Crackers yesterday plunged into college competition and came up with a 12-to-1 victory over Frank Anderson's Stormy Petrels of Oglethorpe.

There were, as they say, considerably less than 10,000 fans present. And it was something of a field day for Cracker batsmen who numbered among their 13 hits five triples and two home runs.

Lefty Archer gave up 11 hits and as many runs in the six innings he toiled. Ed Clement finished the game. He allowed only two hits and one run in two innings.

SOUTHPAWS EFFECTIVE.

Art Evans, leading Sally league pitcher last season, stopped the petrels with one hit in five innings. John Pezzullo, former Savannah southpaw, gave up three hits in the other four.

The Petrels' lone run was a rather amusing one. Paulk bounced a roller to Mauldin in the seventh. Mauldin threw low to first and the ball skipped off to the right of first base near where several Cracker pitchers were warming up.

Jack Bolling couldn't find the ball and nobody would tell him where it was. So Paulk didn't stop running until after he crossed home plate.

FOUR IN FIRST.

The Crackers scored four runs in the first, one in the second and three in the third, two in the fourth and one each in the sixth and eighth.

Dewey Williams, reserve catcher, was the batting star with a homer and two singles in four trips. Bolton, who played right and left before it was all over, socked a homer and a single in three times up. Sullivan hit two triples in four trips and Johnny Hill had a single and triple in two appearances. John Rucker and Al Rubeling also hit triples.

Thomas, Stephenson, Russell and Archer divided the Petrels' four hits.

OPPOSES EX-MATES AT PONCE DE LEON TODAY

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, hurling mainstay of the Crackers last season, will pitch against his ex-teammates this afternoon when his new club, the Washington Senators, meets Paul Richards' boys at Ponce de Leon. Dutch is counted on as one of Bucky Harris' starting pitchers this season. A baffling knuckleball is Leonard's best pitch.

WIDENER FAVORS BELMONT MATCH

Track Head Indorses Admiral-Seabiscuit Race in September.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(P)—Joseph E. Widener, head of Belmont Park, today endorsed the proposal to bring War Admiral and Seabiscuit together in a $100,000 match race at the New York track.

From his Palm Beach, Fla., home, Widener wired Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York state racing commission, that he favored the idea and would seek approval of the track stockholders at the earliest possible date. Widener will return north tomorrow and plans to see Swope next week.

Samuel Riddle, owner of War Admiral, is due to confer here tomorrow with Swope and John D. Hertz, who is seeking to bring the pair together in a $100,000 race at Arlington Park in July. Riddle prefers to hold the race in New York in September, the time proposed by Charles S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit.

ANSLEY IS HOST TOPRO-AMATEUR

Tommy Wilson and the Ansley Park Club will be host today in the opening of a revival of the pro-amateur golf tournaments, sponsored by the Atlanta Professional Golfers' Association.

The tournament is open to every professional in the city and an amateur partner.

No two amateurs will be permitted to play together as in the former events.

It will be an 18-hole affair and prizes will be given to the winner and runner-up.

The pro-amateur tournaments will be played the first Friday in every month, today's event being moved up due to the Augusta National Invitation tourney last Friday at Augusta.

The event next month will be played on an 18-hole course, the site to be determined today at a meeting of the professionals.

Five Share Prize At East Lake

Sixty-two golfers participated in the midweek blind bogey at East Lake Thursday, which was won by C. C. Gray, E. S. Humphreys, O. R. Randall, E. A. Brooks and Gene Brooks, all with 71s.

In a second place were J. B. McConnell, M. W. Radler, Hugh Burgess, F. H. Whiting, T. E. Horton, J. P. Wilhoit, J. J. McConnehey, F. A. Lyons.

These tied for third place with 73s: P. G. Hanahan, P. G. Lombard, C. G. DeNormandie, J. A. Vaughan, W. S. Smith and R. S. Nather.

Bud Bicknell Leads Capital City Qualifiers

R. J. (Bud) Bicknell, with a 69, two strokes under par, took the lead Thursday in qualifying for Capital City's annual club championship tournament.

Charlie Black Jr. is the defending champion, and played with Bicknell Thursday, but decided not to qualify until today or Saturday. Frank Owens, former southern tennis champion, and Edens, a visitor from Baltimore, also played in the foursome.

The qualifying rounds will continue today and Saturday with first matches in the championship scheduled to start Sunday afternoon. One week will be given over to each round of match play.

EX-CRACKER ACE ARRIVES EARLY AND WORKS OUT

Says He Wanted to Scout Batters; Beckman to Oppose Him.

By JACK TROY.

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, who drove in late Wednesday night from Orlando, Fla., and yesterday worked out with his former mates, the Crackers, will be making his first start for the Washington Senators today at Ponce de Leon park.

Big Dutch has been used in a relief role up to now and has turned in several excellent performances. He has impressed Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris so much that they have changed their plans of using him as the No. 1 relief hurler and figure to start him regularly.

Which is what Atlanta fans expected in the first place. Washington simply can't have so many good pitchers that a fellow like Leonard can be tagged for a relief role.

The big mistake was made by Griffith. He announced Leonard would be a relief pitcher before he ever saw him work in spring training.

LEONARD-FERRELL.

The Senators have a catcher who can handle Leonard's stuff—particularly his knuckleball. Rick Ferrell is one of the better mitt-men.

Dutch reported that he was delighted with the chance he has been given and did not have to say he was in fine shape. He looked the part.

"From all I can hear," he said, "the Crackers are going to be bearing down against me. I guess they have known about two weeks in advance that I was due to start against them. You don't have to mention this, but I drove on to Atlanta a day ahead of time to scout the batters."

Leonard said the Washington infield, with big Zeke Bonura on first, was looking great. Bonura, former White Sox first baseman, is blasting the ball and pepping up the inner works.

A Georgia boy, Cecil Travis, of Riverdale, is the shortstop. Buddy Lewis plays third and Buddy Myer, former American league batting champion, is going great at second.

In the outfield, the Senators have Jonathan Stone, Al Simmons, Goose Goslin, George Washington Case, Mel Almada and Taft Wright.

The Senators are making an outfielder out of Jimmy Waddell, who played first base for the Chattanooga Lookouts last year.

'Dutch' Gets Chance

Leonard Up Before With Cards and Dodgers, May Have Last Laugh; Luke Appling Hobbles About With Use of a Cane.

By Jack Troy.

Dutch Leonard's idea about being with the Washington baseball club is simply this: He doesn't care whether they see fit to use him as a starter or as a relief pitcher.

"I'm grateful they feel they can use me at all," he said yesterday. Leonard's case is one of the strangest in modern baseball. No one has ever understood why Brooklyn or St. Louis (Cards), needing pitchers as they do, never gave him a real chance in the big leagues.

It may be that he is just now on the eve of getting his first big chance, with the Washington Americans.

Leonard was easily the best pitcher in the Southern league during his two seasons with Atlanta. And Washington quickly took him in the draft.

If he is given a real chance and has a good year, it will be quite a slap at Brooklyn and the Cardinals. Both still need pitching.

A Southern league standout rarely fails to go good in the majors. The records bear that out.

Appling Visits With Aid of Cane

Somehow you had been sold on the idea that Luke Appling was confined to his home with a broken ankle and that he was taking life much as the celebrated Riley.

You had created a picture of him propped up in a quiet home atmosphere with someone, perhaps Mrs. Appling, attending him hand and foot.

And so it was a bit startling at first, it looked like a trick. But there he came slogging through the rain, aided by a cane.

It was on Wednesday. He visited the Philadelphia Athletics at their hotel. They didn't want him to feel morose about losing so much time from the game so they made such remarks as "You're get-

Featuring several new stunts which will be attempted for the first time Sunday afternoon at Lakewood Park, Lucky Teter, termed the world's champion daredevil, and his Hell Drivers, have made plans with local park officials to stage one more show in Atlanta before leaving for northern engagements.

Atlanta fans recall Lucky Teter as the young daredevil, now 34 years old, who first showed here four years ago with a small troupe with little equipment. Many were astounded at the 17 stunts which he marched out onto the track in front of $75,000 worth of brand-new equipment last Sunday. The show has become a national favorite in the past three years and has grown to such proportions that for the season of 1937 it drew a larger attendance than any other attraction of its kind on the road—over 1,350,000 paid admissions.

Lawyer Pays $825

For Vernon Gomez

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Vernon Gomez, the lawyer who dug into his own pocket and shelled out $825 today so that the Yankee twirler's spring training would not be interrupted by his wife's separation suit.

The lawyer, Lowell Birrell, appeared before Supreme Court Justice Isidor Wasservogel and asked that the case be postponed until Lefty returns from the south, where he is warming up his pitching arm with the New York Yankees.

Justice Wasservogel ruled that $150 back alimony must be paid to June O'Day Gomez, Lefty's musical comedy wife, plus $375 counsel fees, before an adjournment could be granted.

Birrell protested that the money had not arrived yet, although he said Gomez had promised to pay, and he ended up by advancing the money himself.

The appellate division of supreme court last week halted Mrs. Gomez's temporary alimony from $150 to $75 a week and cut her counsel fees from $2,000 to $750.

The remainder of the lineup includes George Stallings on first, Cecil Kelley at second, Scrapy Edwards at short, Spook Newsom on third, Shorty Walker in left field, Joe Gerson in center and Marvin Gillespie in right field.

Bitsy's Playing Days Are Probably Over

Grant's Mother Hopes He'll Retire; Little Atlantan To Go to Daytona Soon.

By MELVIN FAZOL.

Bitsy Grant's tournament playing days are probably over, although the diminutive Atlantan who played on the victorious United States Davis Cup tennis team will be slow to admit it.

The Atlanta Atom, ranked fourth nationally, is at present recuperating from an appendectomy in a Houston, Texas, hospital, and although a hospital bulletin yesterday announced that the net star is "steadily improving," Mrs. B. M. Grant Sr., Bryan's mother, stated he was unable to take food except through a straw, and that he probably another 10 days.

Bitsy's father returned yesterday morning from Houston, and isn't at all pleased with his son's pace of recovery. He plans to take Bryan to Daytona Beach, Fla., for a stay to hasten recuperation.

Mrs. Grant, who some time ago expressed alarm at the steadily increasing number of trophies her son brought back from the tennis wars, explained that Bitsy's present illness might prove to be a blessing in disguise. She has long maintained that Bitsy was overtaxing his physical capacities in competing in tennis tournaments, and had hoped that with the reward of a Davis Cup berth last year he would have dropped the game, except for casual friendly matches in Atlanta. — BREAK O' DAY — name our Kentucky Derby owns, with his private box, ragged hopefulls with a shilling bet—and so on.

The early races went quickly, as they do before any big stake event. The jockeys come from their room and walk through the crowd to the paddock—something America never sees. They don't fear "fixing" in England. The racing officials, the football officials, the boxing officials, all have the support of the people and the press.

The track was beautiful. The track is not dirt but turf. It looks like the rough at some golf club where the lawn mowers have all been broken for a few weeks. There were tulips and flowers of other kinds in profusion about the track.

AND AT LAST, THE HORSES.

At last the horses came. There was no ceremony, except a brief parade. There was no bugle. No music. They lined up—running counter-clockwise—and the 36 of them made an unforgettable sight. The silks of the 36 jockeys made a veritable blaze of color.

There was the barrier—no starting stalls—and the start was a perfect one. They could be seen clearing the early jumps and then they were gone, "into the country" as they say, and the great crowds in stands at the far-away jumps, such as Beecher's, got their thrills.

Becher's Brook claimed many of them. Once there, they said, the water was filled with horses. They came by the stands. Delachance, the American horse favored to win the race, was well up. No one yet noticed Battleship.

But when they came again—13 horses left of the 36 that started, Battleship was to be seen. He was behind. But when they reached the flat he began to come and the crowd caught up his name and the gallant little horse called on the blood of Man o' War and came on to win.

THE AFTER SHOW.

Reggie Hobbs, the trainer for Mrs. Marion Scott, wife of a former Georgia Tech boy, was given an ovation as was his son, Bruce, who rode. "Good old Reggie, good old Bruce," shouted the crowd.

I talked with the Hobbs. Bruce was born on Long Island. Hobbs is a well-known trainer and trained in America for a number of years. Young Hobbs, barely 17, looks like a student, not a jockey.

Mrs. Scott took the victory calmly. "I think," I said in concluding an interview with her near the paddock, "your husband went to school in Atlanta, Ga., where also is located the paper for which I work."

"Yes," she said, "I think he did go to school down there somewhere."

Really, I think Mr. William Alexander ought to advertise more. Randolph Scott was out for the team once. He was a scrub. But he and his wife have a horse which is a varsity horse.

Anyway, I've seen Man o' War and I've seen two of his sons win the Kentucky Derby and the English Grand National. Anything else in horse racing will be an anti-climax.

And I like young Bruce Hobbs all the better for the toast he gave that night at the dinner:

"He is a very gallant horse which has done all that was asked of him. Therefore, I give you the toast of Battleship," he said, and they drank to him and to old Man o' War over in Kentucky.

Anything else will fall a little flat, recalling all that.

Bobby Riggs Plays Marion Reese Tonight; Jones Meets Buxby

TEAMS WRESTLE ON CARD TONIGHT

A new wrestling novelty, the team pit match, will be introduced to Atlanta wrestling fans tonight at East Point, when Promoters Bettis and Jones present team wrestling. Six wrestlers and two referees will all be in the squared circle at the same time.

Gentleman John Mauldin, Atlanta's meanest man; Wild Bill Collins, who seems destined to take this honor from Mauldin; Mike Cassidy, the Omaha Terror, will pair up against the team of Young Goch, popular Atlanta scientific matman; Chippewa Charlie, Cherokee Indian, and Joe Ferona, tiger of the ring. Collins, Mauldin and Cassidy are three of the wildest, most ferocious wrestlers appearing here.

Goch, Ferona and Chippewa rely on straight, clean wrestling. They are capable as individuals and are able to stand up under a great amount of punishment. This unusual match has created a lot of interest among local mat fans and many a surprise should be pulled before this bout is over.

These six wrestlers and two referees will be turned loose in this bout and plenty of sure-fire action is promised those attending.

Texas Angler Stops Here On Visit

Jack Lamb, nationally known Texas fisherman, passed through Atlanta last night on his way from Florida, where he has been fishing for the past two months. Lamb took 10,000 feet of colored motion pictures.

Lamb is widely known for his fish-catching ability, and writes articles for Collier's and other national magazines. He will be remembered by many people here for his exhibition in Piedmont park last year.

Leaving Florida March 21, he made a tour of South Atlantic states, photographing all of the famous gardens and historic places in Charleston, Wilmington, Norfolk and Richmond. His trip northward was climaxed by a visit to Washington, where he took colored motion pictures of the cherry blossoms on the tidal basin. Lamb said they were never more beautiful than this year.

IT'S NO USE, HERE'S MORE RAIN

Cody Laird, right, tells Molly Williamson it's no use to continue drying the Northside Tennis Club courts in an effort to keep the Atlanta Invitation on schedule, since he sees another cloud coming up. Molly, however, had already given up and the photographer caught him in the act of scraping the red mud off his shoes. This picture was made yesterday afternoon as officials worked feverishly to keep the tournament on schedule. It was to no avail, however, and the meet was delayed for the second successive day.

'DUTCH' LEONARD GETS HIS CHANCE

ing soft, Luke." And so on. Later on, Luke walked, unaided, down the wet ramp, to visit the Crackers in their clubhouse. He walked up the ramp to the baseball office to make arrangements for opening day tickets. And he wasn't on crutches.

He wore a leg brace, of course, but he got around as well as you please using only a cane.

"It's tough to be back at this time. I was just getting right, I thought. I felt like I might have a real year. But you can't think too much about such things."

"The doctor told me it won't be so bad. Only the little bone was broken. The big bone was chipped at the base, but it's not as if it were fractured. Meanwhile, it will be very pleasant recovering here. I can see my old mates, the Crackers, play."

It would be something if he manages to stick. Terry gives him a real chance. The Giants' manager is very fond of Big Jim and may, at some future date, make a place for him in the New York organization, either as a scout or, perhaps, as a manager of one of the farm clubs.

Rather hard, it is, to keep a man like Big Jim Lindsey down. Unfortunately, he happened to be from the same town as the man who once managed the Crackers. And there was a bit of friction.

Williams Experiences Life's Darkest Moment

At the Junior Chamber luncheon yesterday Manager Paul Richards caused Rookie Catcher Dewey Williams to experience one of life's darkest moments.

Richards, called upon to speak, said he had just met a fellow in the lobby who told him not to talk; that he would make his speech for him. So Richards turned to the unsuspecting Williams and said, "Here is the man." Williams turned several shades of the rainbow and said, "This is all new to me. I don't know what to say and would appreciate it if Coach Dick Niehaus here would tell you about the Bluebirds."

Coach Niehaus passed the buck. He said he could tell all about the Bluebirds but preferred to have Buster Chatham talk about the Crackers. It was all prearranged and proved quite a stunt. Buster excused himself. Richards finally had to get back up and tell the members that he

NEIL CAVETTE JACKET HURLER

Cavette will work Saturday, and that looks to be the pitching setup at present.

CHIVINGTON OR CAVETTE.—The remainder of the Jacket lineup is tentative.

Joe Ebdon will be at first; Jack Nixon, at second; Billy Gibson at short (if his throwing arm is in shape), with George Smith at third base. The outfield will consist of Appleby in left (if he is not at short), Bo Johnston in center and Alternate Captain Bill Jordan in right.

AUBURN UNCERTAIN.—Auburn, after six practice tilts, is not certain of its team.

Three pitchers, an entire infield and two outfielders were lost from the championship team, making Del Morgan's problems the toughest in recent years in selecting a lineup.

A tentative lineup shows Malvern Morgan at first; Kenmore at second; Bennett at short, and Grisham at third; Bazemore, Thompson and Hayes in the outfield, and Whitten behind the plate.

Southpaw Louis Diamond, is the mostly likely hurling choice at present, with Charlie Kilpatrick, Billy Martin, Bill Andrews and Cooper Sellers ready for relief duty.

Jacket Netmen Meet Clemson Today

Tech's tennis team will meet the Clemson Tigers at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the Jacket courts in the second series of the week.

Tech defeated Mississippi State Monday.

Another Lookout, Johnny Mihalic, is an extra infielder.

"We haven't been winning many exhibition games," Leonard reported, "but the club looks very good."

INTERESTING GAME.—It will be interesting to see the former king of Southern league hurlers operating his knuckle ball against the Crackers. He said he'd be bearing down.

Naturally he will. He always did, whether it was exhibition or regular season. And he particularly wants to look good in this appearance because it will be his first start for the Senators.

It was announced in The Constitution almost a week before the club broke camp at Savannah that Leonard would face his former mates. And it has been repeated several times since.

Manager Paul Richards said yesterday Bill Beckman would oppose Leonard and the Senators. "He'll go as far as he can," Richards said.

Crackers were going to have a real ball club. What they may lack in public oratory, they may be expected to make up in action on the ball field.

COGHLAN, SABIN M'DIARMID GET IN ACTION TODAY

Russell Bobbitt Beats Seleskey Easily; Hendrix Faces Anderson.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Twelve straight hours of tennis—embracing 18 topnotch matches—will be offered net fans today and tonight, as officials strive desperately to keep on schedule with the fourth annual Atlanta invitation tournament, which for the last two days has been washed out by rain.

True, after much rolling, sweeping, dragging and mopping up mud-soaked courts, two matches were played yesterday afternoon, but additional showers prevented other scheduled battles.

Johnny McDiarmid and Arthur Hendrix, third-seeded doubles team, defeated DeSales Harrison and Hunter Bell, 6-1, 6-2, while eighth-ranked Russell Bobbitt eliminated Weldon Seleskey, 6-0, 6-3, in an all-Atlanta singles encounter.

WORK FEVERISHLY.—Tournament officials—Cody Laird, Molly Williamson and M. F. Crawford—worked feverishly to get at least one of the water-soaked courts into playing condition during the lull in the rain yesterday afternoon. But always a new shower made it impossible to play more than the two matches.

Sixth-seeded Bernie Coghlan, of Los Angeles, and Gus Ganzenmuller, of New York, will start to-Atlanta civic clubs will have their night as guests of the Northside Tennis Club if it takes all summer, officials announced last night.

Tickets were first issued members of the Rotary, Lion, Civitan and Kiwanis Clubs for Wednesday night's matches. Rain postponed the event and club officials announced the tickets would be good Thursday night. Rain again interfered.

Yes, the tickets are still good for tonight's round.

Feature of the afternoon play will be the match between Johnny McDiarmid, third ranked, and Atlanta's Burtz Boulevard, surprise winner over Merritt Cutler, of New York, in the first round. The battle will start at 4:30. Second-seeded Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, is scheduled to meet Georgia Tech's Red Hill at 1:30 in another of the daylight features.

Top-ranked Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Champ Reese, of Atlanta, will open the nocturnal bouts at 7 o'clock. The long-awaited Davey Jones-Martin Buxby affair will be played at 9. Arthur Hendrix will play J. Norman Anderson, of New York, at 8 o'clock.

FAST ROUND.

In all, it is one of the fastest and most colorful rounds ever to be held in an Atlanta tournament, with feature matches bobbing up at every hour.

Twenty-five cents will be charged for the daylight session and 40 cents at night. Sixty box seats are on sale at 40 cents in the afternoon and 55 cents at night.

Seeded teams in the doubles were announced yesterday. Bobby Riggs and Wayne Sabin draw the top spot; Johnny McDiarmid and Arthur Hendrix are ranked second; Bernie Coghlan and Martin Buxby, third, and Elwood Cooke and Harris Everett, fourth.

State Takes Augusta Liquor In Raids on Eve of Election

Revenue Agents Hold Stocks of Three Wholesalers and Say Seized Beverages Are Subject to Levy or Outright Confiscation Under Georgia Law.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—(P)—State revenue agents, unexpectedly raiding on the eve of the Richmond county local option election tomorrow, confiscated liquor stocks of at least three wholesalers today in Augusta, where whiskey was sold openly for years in defiance of the recently supplanted Georgia dry law.

(Meanwhile, Ware county citizens cast their ballots on the repeal question, voting legalization of liquor by an unofficial count of 522 for and 210 against. Waycross is the county seat.)

Marvin Griffin, state superintendent of liquor warehouses under the new state providing local option whiskey referendum, said the liquor was subject to state tax or to confiscation as contraband.

All liquor sold or processed in Georgia, it was explained, must bear Georgia tax stamps, in addition to federal markings or those of any other state.

Augusta several years ago licensed liquor sales here on a "home rule" basis approved by city council. Bottles were displayed prominently in stores during the era when Georgia law forbade anything stronger than beer and wine. The local option measure was passed by the state legislature early this year.

Richmond county, of which Augusta is the seat, gave strong majorities for repeal in the 1935 and 1937 state referenda, when the old dry law was upheld. Final arrangements for a local option vote tomorrow were under way as the state agents appeared.

The Augusta dealers were warned on February 16 to stop selling their "locally legalized" liquor," said Griffin. "The state is entitled to the tax and the state needs the tax."

Mayor R. E. Allen, of Augusta, this afternoon said that he had been assured by a state official in Atlanta that whiskey imported by the state agents would not be confiscated.

If Richmond county votes for repeal tomorrow the liquor will be returned to the owners, he said he had been assured.

Receipts are being given," the mayor said, "and the liquor will be returned when it is legalized. It will have the proper stamp tax affixed."

Those who suffered the loss of their liquor today took small consolation from the mayor's assurance, however.

"I stand to lose any way it comes out," one said. "I've already paid 40 APPLICATIONS FOR LIQUOR STUDIED Hundred Blanks for Store Permits Given Out; Police Examine Requests.

Strict investigation of applicants for Atlanta liquor store licenses began yesterday as nearly 40 applications for retail and wholesale licenses were filed with City Clerk J. L. Richardson the first day blanks were available.

More than 100 application blanks were given out by the city clerk with the prospect that as many more will be distributed within the next few days.

Thorough Investigation.

As fast as applications for wholesale and retail licenses were filled out, sworn to, and filed with the city clerk, they were turned over to the police department for thorough investigation during the 10-day period which must elapse before the police committee can act.

John H. Smith, investigator, took up the work of checking the desirability of issuing licenses to the various applicants. He has in the past investigated applications for beer and wine licenses and for boarding houses, hotels and other businesses which come under police supervision.

Two Applications.

Only two applications for wholesale licenses came in yesterday. Stuart P. Murray, who was chairman of the Fulton repeal committee, and Willard Reed applied for a license to operate at 385 Stephens street, and Jack Stein applied for a state distributing license to operate at 443 Whitehall street.

More than 35 applications for retail licenses were filed, seeking locations mostly in the downtown area. H. Mendel, of 21 Houston street, was first to get his application on file.

The police committee is scheduled to meet April 15, prior to council's session April 18. It was expected the committee will decide on recommendations on applications that night and act formally on the papers the day of council's session. Thus, applications filed today can be acted on at council's session.

Georgia Beverage Association's forces in the Henry Grady hotel will be available again today to prospective liquor dealers who wish to file applications for city permits, officials announced.

NEW SUBMARINE SAILS ON TRIAL TRIP APRIL 18

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(P)—The navy announced today the new submarine Salmon would sail April 18 from New London, Conn., on its shakedown cruise.

Under command of Lieutenant M. M. Stephens, the submarine will visit New York, Guantanamo, Cuba; Curacao, West Indies; Brownsville, Texas; Mobile, Ala.; Havana, Cuba; Annapolis, Md.; Nassau, West Indies, and Halifax, Nova Scotia.

It will return to New London June 17, and proceed to the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard June 27.

the South Carolina tax on what I had, and when and if it is returned, I'll be stuck for the Georgia state tax. I'm hooked any way you look at it."

Mr. Griffin said this afternoon that he and his men would "probably remain here several days" but did not disclose where activities would be taken up next.

Dealers in other cities, where a situation similar to Augusta's existed, he said, had paid tax on their stocks from inventories made by state men, but here they had refused to do so. He arranged for a place to impound the stocks.

No criminal charges were placed, but dealers asserted if their stocks are held as contraband by the state their losses will run into several thousand dollars. Agents sought out both retailers and wholesalers.

Call for Governor.

A group of Augusta residents, seeking to have the raids countermanded, tried to call Governor Rivers in Atlanta over an open telephone as crowds looked on. He wasn't in. Neither was Revenue Commissioner Grady Head, who is due in Savannah tomorrow to arrange legal sales in Chatham county, which voted wet March 18.

Meanwhile, an election was set in Bacon (Alma) county for April 30.

An election was set in Bacon (Alma) county for April 30. In another development in the liquor situation, at Nashville, Judge W. R. Smith, of the superior court, ruled the county option law constitutional and dissolved a temporary injunction which blocked a vote originally scheduled in Berrien (Nashville) county for March 2.

Supersedeas Asked.

The petitioners, who charge the liquor question did not come under Governor Rivers' call for the special legislative session which enacted the local option law, demanded a supersedeas to preserve the status in Berrien until the supreme court can act.

They argued that if a supersedeas were not granted and an election held, the question would become moot and therefore present nothing to be determined by the supreme court. Judge Smith gave counsel until Saturday to submit briefs on the question.

Litigation over the first county to vote, Dougherty (Albany), is now before the supreme court, with arguments scheduled later this month. A supersedeas was refused when an attempt was made to block the election in that county.

Doctors Learn Warning Signs, Halt Apoplexy

NEW YORK, April 7.—(P)—Apoplexy, the "stroke" which heretofore has killed without warning, can now be foreseen and ward off, the American College of Physicians was informed today.

Apoplexy's official name is cerebral hemorrhage. The federal census ranks it as the fifth cause of death from disease in the United States. Ahead of it are heart trouble, cancer, pneumonia and kidney disease.

It has been one of the most feared of all diseases because it has seemed to strike in good health, without giving a chance to realize the danger.

Eight definite signs which foretell the approach of one of these apoplectic strokes were described to the college by Albert S. Hyman, M. D., director of the Witkin Foundation for the study and prevention of heart disease.

All these warning signals occur in the region of the head and in definite ways that show they are connected with the brain. They range from headaches to dizziness, always coupled with high blood pressure. They occur, he said, during the danger zone which precedes one of these strokes.

A treatment for them, he said, has been developed by the foundation and proved to be effective in 81 per cent of the cases treated. It has been under test for three years.

The new treatment is known as subdural spinal anesthetic block. By this method the anesthetic is injected, not into the spine, but into the outer of three linings covering the spine.

With this treatment high blood pressure is lowered in some persons for "relatively long periods of time," but never permanently, it was said.

HEAD TESTIFIES

Commissioners Favor Post-Office Tax Collections.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—T. Grady Head, Georgia state tax commissioner and internal revenue commissioners of South Carolina, Oklahoma and Texas, testified here today in favor of the Tarver bill which would authorize the post office department to cooperate with the several states in collecting state taxes.

Representative Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, author of the measure, is especially anxious to curb the sending of cigarettes through the mails into the state without paying a sales tax.

The post office department submitted an unfavorable report on the bill because it would entail too much federal expense and would "violate" the sanctity of the mails.

A native of Birmingham, Mrs. West was a grand daughter of the late Major Albert Elmore, one-time Alabama secretary of state.

SHARP GAIN RECORDED IN LAGRANGE BUILDING

LAGRANGE, Ga., April 7.—Building permits took a sharp jump upward in March, totaling $53,680, as compared with $2,030 and $2,210 for February and January, respectively.

Major March permits included: Repair work to 122 mill village houses, $28,000; five new dwellings and three tenant houses, totaling $20,450; renovation of a downtown office building, $1,600, and other construction, $5,630.

Student Education in Temperance Keeps Jump Ahead of Legal Liquor

Temperance education in Georgia's public schools has kept a jump ahead of legalized liquor, the State Department of Education disclosed yesterday.

Compulsory study of health, including one text book devoted entirely to alcohol and habit forming drugs, was added to the school curriculum last fall, Assistant State Superintendent Melvin Thompson said, and all high school students must obtain credit for this toward graduation.

The health study program, however, is not connected with the wet vs. dry question, Dr. Thompson said, although the book on alcohol and drugs is one of four prescribed for the course. Others are texts covering safe and sane use of the highways, first aid and accident prevention, and a volume now being prepared covering specific Georgia health problems.

Dr. Thompson said the temperance book, written by Grant Donnelly, was chosen for its thoroughness and absence of "propaganda."

"It is a scientific treatment of the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human body, and their relation to health," he explained.

Thompson said the text was used by some eighth grade classes, but was confined chiefly to first year high school students. It is the first year that temperance has had a specific place in the school curriculum.

Previously, Thompson said, health texts have made passing reference to alcohol and narcotics, without discussing them fully.

The forthcoming volume on Georgia health problems is being prepared jointly by the departments of health and education.

"When students read about malaria," Thompson said, "they will read not about malaria among the natives of Cuba or the Indians of South America, but about the problem of malaria faced in Georgia."

"Similarly, the menace of typhus fever, tuberculosis and other contagious diseases will be brought home with equal vigor."
